U.S. Tells Portugal Not To Let Nazis Use Her Islands

Secretary Hull Adds That America Policy Is Based on Self-defense

By J. C. STARK
WASHINGTON, June 10 (AP)—The United States cautioned Portugal today against allowing any use of its strategic islands in the Atlantic by Nazi forces which "now threaten the peace and safety" of the Western Hemisphere.

Secretary of State Hull assured the Portuguese government in a formal note that the United States has "no aggressive intentions" against the Cape Verde Islands or the Azores, or the territory of any other country.

But he emphasized that the American government views "with increasing anxiety the constantly expanding acts of aggression on the part of a certain belligerent power which now threaten the peace and safety of the countries of this hemisphere."

WASHINGTON, June 10, (AP) — Anticipating "very grave danger of a shortage" of coal next winter, the government urged house-holders throughout the country tonight to "buy winter coal now."

At the same time Secretary Ikkes removed the qualification "probably" from forecasts of an oil shortage and said definitely that easterners "will have to get along with less gasoline for their cars and probably less oil to heat their homes." No indication was given,

[By The Associated Press]
ROME, June 10.—Premier Mussolini told his people today that the United States is at war with the Axis in fact if not legally but that "American intervention" will not prevent a Nazi-Fascist victory.

In effect, Il Duce defied the United States to declare war formally. He assailed President Roosevelt, calling him "Delano Roosevelt," as an example of "a dictator in the pure classic meaning of the term."

Further, Mussolini said that American intervention in the war would result in bringing to the United States "an Authoritarian, Totalitarian regime."

The occasion was observance of the first anniversary of Italy's declaration of war. Il Duce spoke before a full dress session of the chamber of Fasces and Guilds, the Fascist-style development of what once was the Lower House of the Italian Parliament.

The fifty-minute speech was carried by loudspeaker to crowds gathered in public squares and by radio throughout the nation, all stores having been ordered closed for the occasion.

United States Ambassador William Phillips was conspicuously absent from the diplomatic gallery of the chamber.

"It should be known that American intervention does not bother us excessively," Il Duce said. "An explicit declaration of war would not modify the actual situation, which is one of de facto war if not de jure."

Says Intervention Too Late
"American intervention, even completely employed, would be too late, and if not late would not change the terms of the problem."

"American intervention will not give Britain victory, but will prolong the war. It will not limit the space of the war, but will extend it beyond the oceans."

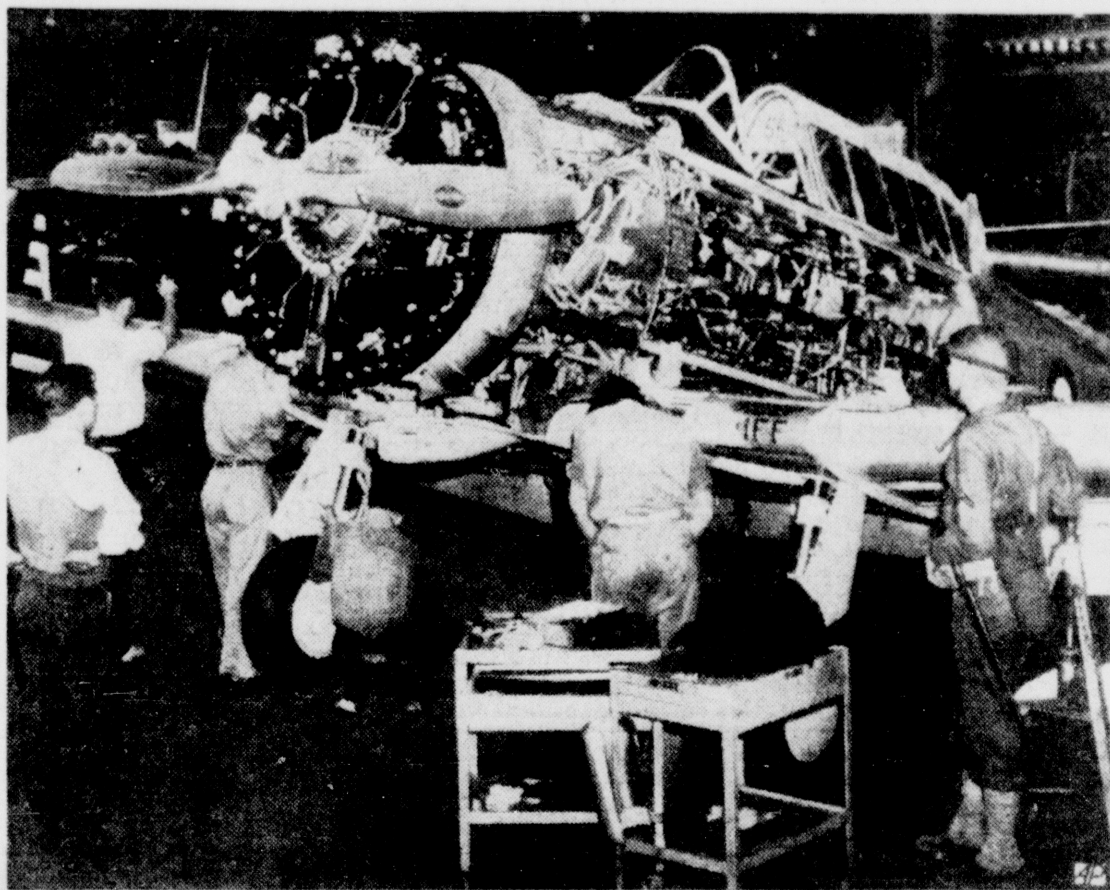

"It will transform the United States regime into an Authoritarian Totalitarian regime compared with which the former European regime—Fascist and Nazi—will find themselves far surpassed and perfected."

Then Mussolini turned to President Roosevelt personally.

Income Tax Rates

Treasury Advises against Rise because of Higher
Living Costs

WASHINGTON, June 10 (AP)—Single persons making less than $800 and married couples earning below $2,000 would continue to be exempt from individual income taxes, under a decision today by the House Ways and Means committee.

Writing a $3,500,000,000 new tax bill to help finance the defense program, the committee voted to retain the current personal exemptions for all individual income tax purposes. This means also continuance of the present $400 credit for dependents, such as children.

Of the 16,000,000 persons who filed returns this year on their 1940 income, only about half actually paid taxes, the remainder going tax free because the total of their exemptions, credits and deductions was greater than their gross income.

New income tax rates, expected to be much stiffer than those now applying, were left to future determination. Committee members indicated a vote might be taken on that tomorrow.

In deciding to keep the personal exemptions at the present level, the committee followed treasury recommendations against broadening the income tax base to include lower income brackets. The treasury said present exemptions were low enough in the face of a danger of rising living costs.

The committee voted on Saturday to retain the present exemptions for surtax purposes. The vote today was to keep them for normal taxes also, meaning they would be the bottom level for all individual income taxes.

Another committee decision reduces the total exemption of "heads of families," who are not husbands or wives.

At the present time, a widow who has one child is allowed $2,000 as "head of family" and $400 "credit for dependent."

The committee adopted a motion

Prime Minister Explains
British Disaster; Puts Nazi Sea Losses at 257,-
000 Tons in May

[By The Associated Press]
LONDON, June 10.—Winston Churchill, fighting the great parliamentary battle of his life before his critics in Commons, made it plain today that as long as he was Britain's war leader he was going to strike rather than stand still, to act rather than risk inaction and surrender.

This, he said without apology, was his choice between the "terrible alternatives" offered him on Crete and this would be his choice to the end.

He rejected, with a sharp "no," suggestions for the formation of an imperial war cabinet.

He said flatly that he could not and would not explain every British defeat—because such explanations would help the Axis, would be only partial and not informative as to the conduct of the war as a whole and because: "Defeat is bitter. It is no use trying to explain defeat. People do not like defeat and they do not like explanations. . . there is only one answer to defeat. That only answer is to defeat the enemy."

Turns on Accuser

He turned sharply upon his chief accuser—Leslie Hore-Belisha, a former war secretary—and said that, while he welcome such criticism as had been put in the House, there was other criticism "calculated to give one the feeling of a challenge to the security of the administration."

His voice rough and tight with emotion, he retraced his earlier statements that some German paratroopers descending on Crete had worn New Zealand battle dress, and this was his explanation heard in a profound silence.

"I have this report to the House, as it reached me from the commander in chief of the Middle East, but he now informs me that a mistake arose from the fact that parachute troops after landing at one point drove a number of New Zealanders walking wounded with them and before them in their attack and therefore the cry arose that they were in New Zealand uniform."

The disaster of Crete, the Prime minister said frankly, was "a somber

Agreement Reached In Aluminium Strike at Cleveland Plant

Provides for a General Wage Increase of One Cent An Hour

WASHINGTON, June 10 (AP)—An agreement for settlement of the strike at the Cleveland plant of the Aluminum Company of America was announced tonight by the defense Mediation board and Judge Walter P. Stacy of the board said it was hoped that production would be resumed tomorrow.

The agreement is subject to ratification by the union.

Stacy said the agreement provided for a general wage increase of one cent an hour to all employees in the plant.

The increase would raise the minimum wage in the five Cleveland plants from seventy-two to seventy-three cents an hour. The union had sought a general raise of four and one-half cents and an increase in the minimum wage to seventy-five cents. Stacy said the increases would put wages at the Cleveland works on a parity with those at the company's New Kensington, Pa., plant.

The agreement also provides for a contract between the company and the CIO Die Casters' Union, to be signed forthwith.

The plants, which hold $50,000,000 to $60,000,000 of defense contracts

IN SYRIA, June 9 (delayed) (AP)—British forces pushing into Syria today met only a quickly-collapsing French resistance and no opposition at all in many places.

Australian infantrymen taking the Coastal Lebanese road were held up slightly when defense forces blew up a section of the road near Escandelon.

The road was known to have been mined at that point, and Australian efforts to prevent the explosion failed. After a short delay a detour was established.

In the drive on Damascus the British attained points as far as forty miles inside Syria and used cavalry detachments. Little opposition was encountered.

RIO DE JANEIRO, June 10 (AP)—Survivors of the sunken United States ship Robin Moor declared she was "torpedoed by a German submarine" in the South Atlantic, Captain Waldemar Lucio Pereira, skipper of the rescuing Brazilian steamer Ozorio, radioed the Associated Press tonight.

Forty-six persons, including three women and one child were aboard the Robin Moor when she went down May 21. The Ozorio picked up eleven of them.

No trace of the others who took to lifeboats has been found aside from a few pieces of floating luggage and a child's toys, the Ozorio captain said.

The Ozorio and her eleven survivors are due at Recife, Brazil, at 11 p. m. (9 p. m. EST) tomorrow night. Further details of the Robin Moor's fate are expected then.

The eleven survivors were described as being in fairly good physical condition despite their exhaustion after spending eighteen days in an open boat without adequate water supplies under the broiling equatorial sun.

WASHINGTON, June 10 (AP)—A White House request that the public reserve judgment on the sinking of the American ship Robin Moor was issued today while officials gravely concerned, tried to determine whether a Nazi U-boat sent the vessel to the bottom.

Negro Shot Dead In Texas Court

Is Killed by Husband of Attacked Woman as Trial Opens

CONROE, Tex., June 10 (AP)—Bob White, a 31-year-old Negro twice convicted of raping a white woman and each time saved from the electric chair by a higher court, was shot dead by the husband of his alleged victim as his third trial opened in a crowded court room today.

Just as the ninth juror had been accepted, W. S. Cochran jumped to his feet, approached to within one pace of the prisoner, drew a .38 caliber pistol and sent a bullet into the Negro's head. White, slumped in his chair, dead, as terrorized spectators threw the district court into bedlam.

Cochran, outwardly the calmest person in the room, stepped up to Foreman, a special prosecutor in the case, and handed him the gun. Then he surrendered to Deputy Sheriff Herschel Suratt. A charge of murder was lodged against Cochran, a large land owner, and Justice J. W. McDaniel fixed bond at $500. A few minutes later the bond was posted, and Cochran walked from the building.

District Attorney W. C. McClain said the case would be referred to the grand jury, now in session.

White was charged with attacking Mrs. Cochran at her ranch home, ten miles from Livingston, in August, 1937.

His first conviction was reversed by the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals, his second by the Supreme Court of the United States.

Court Hears Case Of Defunct Pa. Insurance Exchange

Right of Indemnity Co. To Sue Maryland Subscribers Questioned

ANNAPOLIS, Md. June 10 (AP)—The question of whether a liquidator for the defunct Keystone Indemnity Exchange of Pennsylvania has the right to sue Maryland subscribers of the reciprocal insurance exchange to collect assessments ordered by a Pennsylvania court was held under consideration today by the court of appeals.

The high court also took under advisement re-arguments in a case in which Margaret K. Councilman, administratrix of an estate, seeks an injunction to prevent State Game Warden E. Lee Le Compte from destroying a duck blind erected in the Great Choptank river.

Matthew H. Taggart, Pennsylvania insurance commissioner, appointed liquidator for the Keystone Indemnity Exchange, brought a test suit against Wachter, Hoskins and Russell, Inc., a Maryland concern and exchange policy holder, to determine if suits can be brought against other exchange subscribers.

If a Baltimore City court opinion is upheld by the appellate court, the liquidator could bring suit against 4,818 persons or corporations in Maryland to collect approximately $611,000 in assessments.

The Dauphin County (Pa.) court of common pleas, which ordered the exchange liquidated, decreed that subscribers holding policies issued between April 9, 1929 and May 18, 1933, should pay an assessment equal to one annual deposit premium on each policy issued to them.

Taggart seeks to recover assessments on four automobile liability insurance policies held by Wachter, Hoskins and Russell, Inc., the lower court upheld Taggart's suit but said the defendant was entitled to a "set-off" against the total amount of its assessment.

Both the liquidator and the Maryland firm filed cross-appeals. The case argued by special arrangement.

Replies to Portuguese Note
The note, sent to the Portuguese Minister, Dr. Joao Antonio De Blandino, was in reply to critical "observations" on President Roosevelt's references to Portugal's islands in his May 27 fireside address.

The Portuguese note was not made public.

President Roosevelt had declared in his speech that Germany has "the armed power at any moment to occupy Spain and Portugal"; that Nazi occupation or control of the Cape Verde Islands and the Azores would "directly endanger the freedom of the Atlantic and our own physical safety"; and that the islands would "provide a springboard for actual attack against the integrity and independence of Brazil and her neighboring republics."

Portugal took exception to these remarks, as it previously had in connection with suggestions by Senator Pepper (D-Fla.) that the United States occupy the Portuguese islands.

In the case of Pepper, the United States told Portugal that it had no aggressive designs on the islands and explained that the Senator was not speaking for the government.

We Harbor No Aggressive Intent
The new Portuguese note was delivered on May 30, three days after the president made his fireside speech.

Before the State Department made public Secretary Hull's reply, President Roosevelt was asked at his press conference this afternoon about reports that Portugal had protested. He replied that he thought there had not been any protest and that there was nothing in his speech for Portugal to protest.

It was indicated that the note had not yet been brought to the president's attention.

Secretary Hull's reply noted Portugal's "declarations reaffirming its position of neutrality and its determination to defend its neutrality and sovereign rights against any attacks."

"For its part," Hull said, "the government of the United States can state categorically that it harbors no aggressive intentions against the sovereignty or territorial integrity of any other country."

or threatened failure of production at any plant as a result of a strike, or threatened strike, or other cause.

Offered as Amendment
Robert P. Patterson, under secretary of war, told the House military committee that the War Department wanted Congress to speed action on legislation of this type offered in the House by Chairman Vinson (D-Ga.) of the naval committee.

Patterson said that the department was willing to sidetrack temporarily its request for the so-called "property seizure" bill to speed passage of the Connally-Vinson measures.

He explained that President Roosevelt took over the North American factory in California under his constitutional powers as commander-in-chief of the army and navy "but we would favor express statutory authority."

The Connally bill granting this authority was offered as an amendment to the selective service act which already empowered the president to take over plants if the operators failed to cooperate in defense production.

Republican and Democratic senators alike voiced support for the Connally proposal and he accepted an addition by Senator Maloney (D-Conn.) to assure eventual return of any seized plant.

Senators Vandenberg (R-Mich.) and Murdock suggested that Communists and others favoring government ownership of industries might foment strikes to force nationalization of industry.

"I don't think a few Communists will be doing this to get a bayonet jabbed into their stomachs like they did in Italy," Connally replied.

LaFollette's Proposal
Byrd asked the Senate to strengthen the Connally measure by saying "that it is the sense of Congress that strikes in industries that affect the national defense effort are contrary to sound public policy and they are hereby condemned." Murdock suggested that the condemnation include "bottle-necks" in supplies of aluminum and steel where he said industrialists had been at fault.

Senator LaFollette (Prog-Wis.) announced he would ask that the Byrd statement include a recognition of the importance of collective bargaining. This caused Senator Byrnes (D-Sc.), acting majority leader, to move the recess until tomorrow.

The LaFollette proposal, expected to prolong debate, stated "that complete cooperation between government, management and labor can best be achieved by the wholehearted acceptance of the principles of collective bargaining and the recognition of the rights of employees to designate representatives of their own choosing, for the purposes of collective bargaining, without interference through unfair or oppressive labor practices."

Associated Press, presumably after interviewing the castaways.

At the same time, the state department had received from Jefferson Caffrey, the American ambassador to Brazil an assertion that the ship "was sunk," but no further details. This was the only "official" information in the possession of the government. Through commercial radio channels, however, the navy received a message saying the Robin Moor was "torpedoed by a German Submarine."

Sailed on May 6
The Robin Moor, a craft of 5,000 tons sailed from New York on May 6 for Capetown, South Africa with a general cargo. The maritime commission said its information was that this included no munitions. In addition she carried a crew and passenger list of more than 40.

On May 21 the ship sank at longitude 6.15 North, latitude 25.30 West, a position some 700 miles South of the Cape Verde islands, and a similar distance from Dakar, French West Africa. The crew and passengers took to the sea in four lifeboats.

On Sunday, the Ozorio, plying from Norfolk, Va., to Rio De Janeiro came upon one of the boats, a few hundred miles North of the Easternmost protrusion of South America, fully 800 miles from the position of the sinking. Captain Lucio sent the Associated Press the following message at midnight last night.

"On June 8, at 9 o'clock in the evening, in latitude 04 North and longitude 37.37 West, I rescued eleven survivors in one life boat of the North American ship Robin Moor, which was torpedoed May 21 at the position latitude 6.15 North, longitude 25.30 West.

"Their names are John J. Banigan, Karl Nilson, Virgil Sandelin, William S. Carey, Peter Buss, Donald Schaeble, H. O. Rice, R. Carlisle, Antonio Santos, Hugh Murphy, and P. C. Eccles.

The saved members of the crew declared there were three more lifeboats, with twenty-eight members of the crew and seven passengers, including three women and one child.

"The commander of the Brazilian ship Tamandare, which I also requested to investigate, said that about 1 p. m. yesterday he found pieces of baggage consisting of one suitcase and children's toys.

"Unfortunately nothing more has been found up to now.

"Among the eleven rescued are three officers.

"We are continuing to Recife (Pernambuco) Brazil, where we expect to arrive tomorrow night."

Officials Are Concerned
Word of the sinking of the Robin Moor and the attendant circumstances brought uneigned concern to Washington officialdom, conscious of the possibility of its containing an "incident" of significant proportions. Speculation was rife and included the possibility that Germany was using Dakar as a submarine base, which has been unofficially reported to be the case several times.

Late in the morning, while the official investigation continued, Stephen Early, a presidential secretary, told reporters that "the president would appreciate it if there was a suspension of judgment on the sinking, pending a determination of the facts." He also said it seemed clear that the sinking was "in American waters—in this side of the Atlantic."

At the same time the search for the missing lifeboats, crewmen and passengers continued, and the arrival of the Ozorio in Brazil, where the survivors may be questioned by American consular or diplomatic officials, was impatiently awaited.

When the comptroller's office returned it, he said, the department paid the men out of a "working fund" which is ordinarily drawn on only for urgent purposes.

Quick said the fund, amounting to $4,500, soon would be exhausted if the transfer of funds was not effected.

The forestry department's monthly classified payroll amounts to approximately $2,800.

Specific Provisions Lacking
The assistant forester said that lacking specific financial provisions in the law which divorced the forestry department from the University of Maryland, the department expected the university to turn over to the state comptroller the funds which it had budgeted for forestry.

He pointed out that the university budget as passed by the 1939 legislature did not make a specific provision for forestry, but lumped together all the university's expenses.

The new law, subject of much controversy in the last legislature, provides for a five-man commission of state forests and parks to administer the affairs of the department.

One member of the commission must be appointed on recommendation of the state senate, one on recommendation of the farm bureau, one must have had experience in the business of lumbering, and the other two must be chosen for "their general interest in the advancement of forestry."

State Forestry Department Is Without Money

Payroll Is Returned from Comptrollers Office Minus Explanation

BALTIMORE, June 10, (AP)—The State Forestry Department was operating today virtually without money.

Assistant Forester Walter J. Quick said the lack of funds, disclosed when the comptroller's office returned without explanation a payroll, was a by-product of the department's transfer from the University of Maryland to independence.

Quick said he queried the comptroller's office in Annapolis and was told that no forestry funds had been transferred by the University of Maryland, and that no provision for a transfer had been made.

Commission To Be Named
Quick said the comptroller's office also told him "it appears from the law that a commission will have to be appointed to administer the department's funds."

The law provides for a five-man commission, which had not been named by Gov. O'Connor today.

Quick said the payroll in question was for several forest guards employed in Western Maryland late last month. It was sent originally to the University of Maryland, and returned with the explanation that the university had closed its books with regards to the forest department. Quick added.

He said the payroll was then sent to Employment Commissioner Harry C. Jones and approved by him before being sent to Annapolis.

When the comptroller's office returned it, he said, the department paid the men out of a "working fund" which is ordinarily drawn on only for urgent purposes.

Quick said the fund, amounting to $4,500, soon would be exhausted if the transfer of funds was not effected.

and ferocious battle" which had been costly to Britain—but to Germany, too. For, he said, the Nazis had lost 5,000 troops drowned, 12,000 killed or wounded and 180 fighter planes and bombers and 150 troop transport aircraft against British losses of 15,000 men killed, wounded or taken prisoner.

Finally, turning from Crete as a tragic business that now was finished, he offered hope for success in the greater battles—those of production and those for control of the Atlantic.

British production of guns and heavy tanks, he declared, was fifty per cent higher in the first quarter of 1941 than in the last quarter of 1940 and the great struggle for the Atlantic is "being well maintained."

In May alone, he said, 257,000 tons of Axis shipping had been sunk, captured or scuttled to avoid capture.

Makes No Promises
Then, so moved that the clarity of language that had made him famous was much impaired, he concluded:

"I give no guarantee. I make no promise or prediction for the future, but if the next six months—during which we must expect ever harder fighting and many disappointments—should find us in no worse position than in which we stand today and if, after having fought so long alone against Germany and Italy and all the intrigues and treacheries of Vichy, we should still be found in six months time to be faithful and unbeaten guardians of the Nile valley and of the regions which lie about it—then I say that a famous chapter will have been written in the martial history of Britain and the British Commonwealth of Nations."

Thus ending one of his longest war reviews since he took the prime ministership, he strode from the House, and as the members filed noisily into the lobbies the generally expressed opinion was that, while he had for the second time in a month successfully withstood a wave of criticism, the opposition was continuing to rally behind Hore-Belisha.

Some observers said that Churchill's government needed a martial victory to continue its hold over parliament.

dictator in the pure classic meaning of the term, Sulla is cited, "If Duce told his countrymen, 'All right, Sulla appears a modest amateur in comparison with Delano Roosevelt.'"

(Lucius Cornelius Sulla, a Roman dictator who lived from 138 to 78 B.C., was noted for a policy of "blood and iron" and was referred to by his enemies as "half-lion, half-fox." He was the first ruler in Roman history to post in the public forum a list of outlaws and public enemies, a famed "proscription" which launched a reign of terror.)

Sun-tanned and apparently in vigorous health, Il Duce bounded to the rostrum two steps at a time, and he spoke vigorously, pounding his desk with his fist to emphasize his points.

"By agreement with the German command," he announced, "almost all Greece, including Athens, will be occupied by Italian troops."

Spain, he said, will be left to decide whether she enters the war.

"We are not in any way soliciting the decision of Spain," Il Duce said. "We limit ourselves to thinking and believing that Spain knows on which side stand its proven friends and on which stand its no less proven enemies."

group, that there be no discussion because of union action and that they be permitted to resume negotiations on their demand for seventy-five cents an hour, minimum wages and ten cents an hour wage increases.

Col. Branshaw said there would be no discrimination. Continued negotiations and mediation also had been pledged by President Roosevelt.

Wyndham Mortimer, union executive, said the mass meeting agreed to demand that troops removed from the factory as a condition of the return but this was abandoned in conference.

"I told them it would be still tell the army what to do," Mortimer said. "The best thing for them to do is to return to work immediately."

Troops Will Remain
When interviewers asked Branshaw when the troops would be removed, he said they would wait "when and only when the United States Government decided the need for them no longer existed."

The mass meeting cheered reading of a telegram from Branshaw which said:

"I urge North American workers to return to their jobs, believe their strike was justified in view of the huge war production of the airplane industry, but urge them to return to work in view of the odds against them and I am sure that the National CIO leadership will see that they get fair treatment. Their strike should not be called a defeat but a strategic retreat."

Three planes for the United States Army were flown from North American runways in this morning and a fourth, a biplane trainer built for the Army, was taken to an unannounced destination. All these were coming since the army assumed charge of the plant.

Normal production of the plant ten planes daily.

Mussolini said that "Japan's attitude is in perfect line with the 'tripartite pact' and that the Japanese are a proud and people who could not remain different in the face of American aggression against the Axis."

He stressed Italian-German terms ridiculing rumors of "two peoples, one war," he said.

After stating that "recent economic points in our food situation related to the distribution of stocks" and warning that "producers will be punished increasingly hard," Il Duce closed a note of optimism for Fascist Italy.

"The enemy," he said, "is so close because he knows the standard is supreme, but we are so tenacious that he . . .

Spotted Fever Not Confined to West; Bites of Wood Ticks Cause Disease

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

A report in a medical journal concerning a case of Rocky Mountain spotted fever in Pennsylvania and one in New York state would seem to indicate that dangers from wood-ticks are not confined to the Rocky Mountain regions alone.

The Rocky Mountain region is however liable to epidemics of spotted fever. Spotted fever is contracted from the bite of an infected wood-tick. The term Rocky Mountain region, however, is rather indefinite as it extends practically from Texas to the Pacific ocean and from lower California to lower Canada.

Outbreaks of Rocky Mountain spotted fever usually begin early in April. The number of cases gradually increases in May and June, falls off in July. Very few cases occur in August.

The symptoms come on three to four days after having been bitten by an infected tick. The fever runs a course from fourteen to twenty-seven days. There is no successful treatment after the onset of the fever and hope lies in prevention by fighting the ticks or by submitting to annual vaccination.

There is one safeguard which depends on the peculiar fact that the virus of the disease is not discharged from the tick until after it has fed for several hours. It seems that the virus lies dormant in the tick's body and requires that it be activated by fresh blood. Therefore if the tick is picked off immediately the danger of infection is slight. However, no tick bite should be considered harmless.

A vaccine has been prepared which can be used as a preventive.

It is given as injections under the skin some days apart.

Other Fevers from T

The fever usually attacks adults, those who go in dis, and these are the ones w ac- ially should consider preven ac- ination. In children, the fever assumes the form of paralysis and is probably caused by a tick that has been feeding on a child for five or six days.

The tick may be found anywhere on the body but is usually discovered on the scalp, arm pit, groin, or behind the ear. Several other fevers are transmitted by ticks, such as tularemia, Colorado tick fever (which is mild) and relapsing fever. The germ of most of these diseases lies dormant in the body of many wild and semi-wild animals, rabbits, game birds, squirrels and other rodents. These are the hosts or reservoirs of the tick diseases.

Questions and Answers

B. K.—"What is the cause of fistula? Do they turn to cancer?"
Answer—Fistula may occur any place and is usually due to an infection which burrows through the skin. When fistula is mentioned, what is meant is generally a fistula of the rectum. These can be cured by surgical treatment under a local anesthetic. They do not turn to cancer.

B. P.—"Is it harmful to the eyes to wear sun glasses with prescribed lenses in them? I have to wear glasses all the time and find that for outdoor sports such as horseback riding and sailing, sun glasses with lenses are much less liable to be broken than my regular glasses."

Answer—No, and one of the great advantages of the new Polaroid sun glasses is that they can be ground to fit ocular disability.

E. D. H.—"Are benzedrine sulfate tablets hard on the heart or the nervous system?"

Answer—Benzedrine sulfate tablets if taken indiscriminately. They are unnatural and have a decided effect on the heart, blood pressure and nervous system.

Whiskers Heard In Radio Audition

NEW YORK (AP)—The Aldrich family was rehearsing. The engineer came out of the control room wearing a puzzled look. He examined the microphone connections, searched Ezra Stone's pockets, scratched his head.

Then a big smile dawned on his face. He whipped out a big handkerchief and inserted it between Stone's neck and collar. Stone hadn't shaved that morning, and that scratching sound the engineer had heard was his beard scraping his stiff collar.

Two Things Necessary For Industrial Peace

ARMY CONTROL of the big aviation plant at Ingleside, Calif., and the continued outbreak of strikes in other defense production industries emphasizes with greater force two things that have been obviously needed over a period of many anxious months. One of these is the need for organized labor to clean house. The other is improvement of the National Labor Relations act.

Some steps are being taken by labor to clean house, although they should have been taken long since and should have been more efficacious. Philip Murray, John Brophy and Richard Frankenstein, C. I. O. leaders, have commendably cracked down upon those radical union leaders who defied authority, both of the government and of their unions, in the California plant trouble. It is hoped that their actions in this respect will be more insistent than in the past, and that they will forthwith match their words with deeds.

Racketeering, defiance of authority, jurisdictional strikes and clashes, communistic baring from within and similar evils must be eradicated from the labor field if the great desideratum of industrial peace is to be achieved and the conceded rights of labor are to be preserved. It is imperatively necessary now while the nation is in the midst of its mightiest defense effort, but it is desirable as a permanent program. The great body of laboring men is both peaceably inclined and patriotic. Given fair and wise leadership the workers will avoid the resort to strikes.

It has long been contended that the Wagner act would promote industrial peace, at least so far as disturbances by strikes to enforce the right to collective bargaining. While many held the belief that it would increase strikes instead of reducing them, the declared purpose of the act was to reduce them. But for a long time it has been evident that the law as it stands has not been having the desired effect, although for a while it was officially asserted that strikes and other work interruptions were not of more than normal occurrence. These work stoppages, however, have grown and become widespread. In many instances they have had the effect of causing ramified curtailment of operations even when few in number or involving a comparatively small number of workers. Almost every kind of labor dispute has grown automatically into a strike.

Evidently, therefore, some new policy, or formula, is necessary in order to carry out the avowed purpose of the Wagner act and the need has become more urgent as the nation has proceeded with its gigantic defense program. A number of sensible recommendations have been made for improving the relationship between labor and capital without impairing the admitted rights of labor in collective bargaining.

It has been suggested that the illegitimate strike be defined and outlawed. It has been urged that something be done to prevent labor unions and union leaders, as well as the employer, from intimidating the peaceful workers. It has been recommended that added protection be given to the rank and file of labor membership through such means as public accounting of union funds and a sensible regulation of union fees and dues. Experience has indicated that greater initiative should be given the mediation board set up by the president in order to expedite the delay between the conciliation service and that new agency. Some sort of cooling-off period has been suggested between the outbreak of labor grievances and striking, such as is provided in the satisfactory working of the Railway Labor act.

From all of these and similar recommendations a formula should be evolved and enacted into law in order that the declared purpose of the Wagner act may be carried into practical effect. Plant seizure, while deemed to have been necessary in one emergency, is not the proper answer. Senator Tydings has proposed creation of a three-man board to pass on labor disputes and make decisions binding on both employer and employee alike, with severe penalties for failure to accept the board's rulings. That is something worth consideration.

But experience has shown without further need of quibbling that something must be done; that, in fact, the two things outlined must be done and without further delay. Labor must clean house, and the Wagner act must be improved.

Hitler's Alleged Friendship For the United States

JOHN CUDAHY'S interview with Adolf Hitler in which Hitler says he has no idea whatsoever of invading the Western Hemisphere is one of the most interesting of the war interviews. It can be taken seriously or it can be taken as amusing.

Cudahy, who was once American ambassador to Belgium, believes that Hitler is telling the truth—at least Cudahy gained the impression that Hitler thinks he is telling the truth.

But even those of us with a short memory remember that Adolf said the same thing about Poland. He did not intend to invade Poland. He had no intentions of sweeping down through the Balkans to take over these countries. Goodness, no, he was merely going to protect those little nations.

Before Adolf entered these nations he sent word that he was not belligerent and was merely going to save them from the British. And if Adolf wins the war he quite likely will say to the United States:

"Now, here, we've always been your friends. We don't want to invade your country and we shall not. However, you know that you will have to trade with us or with Russia and Japan as there will not be any other countries for you to trade with."

"That being the case, why should we fight? You just go along and do as I say and there will be no trouble. Maybe I'll give you Canada and Mexico and tell you how to run them. I'll even let you elect the governors of these two countries if you'll elect somebody I favor."

"And, of course, seeing as how we are going to get along so well I'll give you a lot of help in running your own government. I'll even go over to Washington and get whoever I think will make you a good president started."

Anyway, Cudahy, who says he has had eight years' training in factual writing and who insists he is reporting his impressions of Hitler correctly, came away with the idea that Hitler does not want war with the United States if he can run the United States without going to war—a plausible Hitlerian idea.

Draft Authority That Should Be Recovered

ON JULY 1 approximately 1,000,000 young men who will have reached the age of 21 since the first draft registration, last October 16, will register for selective service. There has been a suggestion that these men be placed at the bottom of the list so that they will be called only after the first registration list is exhausted.

The draft administration has failed in several respects, notably in not completing the army examination before taking men from their jobs. This has been improved, but nothing was done about it until thousands of men had lost their jobs and made other sacrifices that could easily have been avoided.

But the policy is being steered toward younger men. It is likely that few of the older men now registered will be called. Today's warfare demands the hardihood, adaptability and stamina of youth. This does not mean that boys from 18 to 21 will be called for combat.

The registration day was set by executive order. Congress should have retained that authority. In fact, it should recover and retain all control of the draft, and stay in session continuously to discharge its responsibilities to the people for what happens to these men.

Father Seems To Be On the Way Up

THIS YEAR'S ADVANCE REPORTS on Father's day indicate that Father is on the way up. In fact, it may not be long until Mother will have to look to her laurels as the most important member of the household.

Merchants report an increase in Father's day purchases. He will receive presents of an astounding variety from cigarettes to household slippers, from shoes to hats. Telegraph companies expect an increase in Father's day messages this year.

A nice point about Father is that he never objects to people being funny about his day. The sanctity of motherhood somehow takes the humor out of Mother's day. In fact, it is suspected that a sentimentalist thought up a day for Mother. But Father's day indubitably was the work of a humorist. The fact that both turned out to have a magnificent sales appeal merely attests to the practicality of the American mind.

But Father, humorous or not, is at least learning that he counts for something with his family. A little appreciation will not hurt him a bit. Never before have fathers enjoyed such prestige. And it is about time.

Tobacco is so scarce in Berlin diners tip waiters with cigarettes. The big spender is the fellow who leaves behind a nickel stogie.

Judging by the sports news, the forest rangers need not worry this season about rook ball players setting the bush leagues on fire.

There's really nothing new under the sun. Even streamlining. It's as old, says the man at the next desk, as the first fish.

Beware of "Pokers"

By MARSHALL MASLIN

I'm about to have black and blue spots on my chest, arms, stomach and shoulders.

Know why? . . . Because I've just been talking to a "poker." No, I take that back. The "poker" has been talking to ME. I didn't do much talking. I couldn't get a word in edgewise. Not even a sharp one. I spent all my time ducking and dodging and retreating. . . . He had me on the run from the start and I couldn't get my offense started. . . . I was off balance the instant the conversation began.

Of course you know what a "poker" is. He's a fellow who can't talk without using his hands on you. Nobody would object to him if he kept his hands in the air, as gestures. But the "poker" uses elbows, forefingers and straight-arms to emphasize his points. He starts talking in the middle of the room and before he's finished his story he has you backed into a corner and you have to go into a clinch or fight your way out.

Please note that I'm referring to a "poker" as HE. I've never met a woman who poked as she talked and I never expect to meet one. It's my belief that the female "poker" doesn't exist. I can't tell you why. It's just a fact.

I wish I could remember what this poking fellow was telling me. It's my impression that it was a very interesting story and I'd like to have heard it. . . . But I couldn't keep my mind on it, couldn't get the point of it. I became so fascinated by that threatening finger of his that I gave all my attention to wining and retreating and softening my stomach muscles, and wondering if it was really against the law to assault and batter a "poker."

Furthermore, I was a coward. I should have turned on him, opened my mouth, performed a great public service, and blasted him with a few recklessly chosen words that would have the enthusiastic support of millions of my fellow citizens.

Instead, I took it meekly and said not a word. I had a chance to be a hero and I muffed it! (Well, what would YOU have done?)

Training Law Is What Was Meant, Gen. Johnson Says

By GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON, June 10—There is a real problem about the fate of selective service men who were called for only one year's training under a specific legislative condition that they cannot be used outside the Western Hemisphere, except in possessions of the United States, including the Philippine Islands.

It has been frequently stated in the press that this condition does not apply now that the president has declared an unlimited emergency. It isn't as simple as that. One can barely conceive such an interpretation but it could be had only by an outlandish twisting of the Selective Service law.

It is doubtful whether even if the law were tortured out of all recognition, it would authorize the use of a drafted man in the Eastern Hemisphere except in the Philippines.

Up to Congress

As to the other point—the authority to hold these men more than twelve months—the law permits the president to do that only after the Congress (no the president) shall have declared that the national interest is imperiled. The president has declared an "unlimited emergency" and he did it under authority of Congress, but it would be going pretty far to say that this fulfills the condition of the statute which requires that Congress shall have declared that the national interest is imperiled.

An even greater twisting would have to be done to hold them through another provision of the selective service law which puts these men into the enlisted reserve for ten years, or until the age of 45. It is argued that, after they are in the enlisted reserve, the president could call them to active duty. But under another law governing the enlisted reserve, a reservist cannot be called for more than fifteen days' duty without his consent except in war or a war emergency declared by Congress and, in this case, the language is "specifically declared by Congress."

There can't be very much doubt that, at the time this law was enacted, the intent, at least, of Congress was that the act meant what it seemed to mean—that these men were selected for training only and that their condition was not to be changed by administrative fiat, but only by some further action by Congress.

Question of Good Faith

There would be some question, too, of propriety, or good faith, or something in taking men under one representation of intention and then switching the ground rules after they are hooked. That is not to say it is like a contract. These men were taken as a matter of right, and this country has power, if it chooses, to draft any man for military service. But under all the old volunteer laws, men were always discharged at the end of their statutory terms of service. Sometimes this was done to the great peril of our armies, as in the Civil War, and even to a greater danger in Scott's army before Mexico City.

Selective Service was a "draft" law and not a "volunteer" law, but tens of thousands of these men who had good claims to deferment did not make them because they wanted to "volunteer" for one year of training, but not for indefinite enlistment.

Of course, the whole question will go out the window in a moment if war is declared, or if Congress makes a declaration of "emergency," or "peril" due to the imminence of war.

Perhaps, for that reason, the subject isn't worth a column, but there have been so many incomplete or careless statements about the precise status and obligation of these men, and so many thousands of them and their families have so vital an interest, that it seemed worth checking-up with the War department.

Since it is a matter of interpretation.

U. S. 'PANZER' CHIEF

Maj. Gen. Magruder

Maj. Gen. Bruce Magruder, commanding the First Armored Division at Fort Knox, Ky., has held every rank in the army from buck private up. Meeting A Need

From the Charleston, W. Va., Daily Mail

Friends of the American newspaper and all it stands for in a democratic way of life who have been sitting patiently by while the prophets predicted its quick demise can rejoice in some recent figures on newspaper circulation.

Newspaper circulation today stands, according to Advertising Age, at 43,348,000 copies, an increase over the total of 41,608,000 reached in 1929, the year of the Golden Age at its most golden. And this increase has come about in spite of the fact that there are now fifty fewer daily papers than there were twelve years ago.

Such growth is more than a reflection of improved business conditions. It means a continuing public faith in the American newspaper to print the news and interpret it in a day when the news, the truest news possible, is of vital importance to the American way of life. It means that the American newspaper is meeting a need that no other medium can fill. No, the newspaper as an institution is not expiring.

That is a fact which will not be lost on advertisers with an interest in reaching the public. It should not be lost on all those of totalitarian persuasion who, hoping for a weak and enslaved press in this country, would use that weakness and slavery as a means for radically altering the American way of life.

The Power Situation

From the Wheeling, W. Va., Intelligencer

President Kellogg, of the Edison Electric Institute, denies that there is any power shortage in the United States or prospect of one. Unused reserves can add ten to fifteen per cent to the present power supply, he declared, with continuous operation of available facilities adding from fifteen to twenty per cent to the output.

Such a margin would seem thoroughly safe, especially when considered in connection with the expansion plans of the power industry. As for the long term, we know there is a limitless supply of coal available in the United States, and that power plants can be erected within a few months.

When it comes to knowledge of the power situation, the judgment of leaders in the industry certainly is to be preferred to that of government bureaucrats. The weight of evidence is all against the Washington propaganda of a threatened power shortage which is being used to win public support of far-flung waterpower development.

"Don't carry priorities and rationings to the point of ridiculousness," is being urged by a sizable bloc of United States senators—not all of them isolationists, either.

The House of Representatives recently passed a bill which, if the Senate passes it, and President Roosevelt signs it, may result in just that sort of situation, according to these members of the upper congressional chamber, and they're fighting it bitterly.

The original bill aimed at the Office of Production Management's priorities division (Edward B. Stettinius, Jr., is its director), of regulatory authority over orders for army, navy and military aviation supplies, either for our own defense or to aid the other democracies.

Amendment Wiggled In That was all right, Representative E. E. Cox of Georgia, however, wiggled in an amendment providing priorities, likely to necessitate a deal of rationing, of civilian as well as military stuff. It also makes Priority Director Edward Stettinius' mandates subject to the previous approval of the joint army and navy munitions board.

In other words, the idea's to transfer, from the civilian priorities and rationing outfit to military authority, control over everything imaginable—not only military junk, but the necessities of civil life, too.

There isn't so much objection to giving the army and navy board the last word as to military commodities but there's plenty of it to depriving civilians of a voice relative to groceries, wearing apparel and miscellaneous merchandise not generally considered classifiable as essential to campaigning against the Axis or fighting the totalitarians later on.

Stettinius Objects What's more, besides the balky senators, functionaries in the Office of Production Management, including Priorities Director Stettinius, don't like to the notion. They think they know more about the civilian situation than army and navy officers do.

Regulation of our steel output, for instance, is recognized as militarily vital. Ditto aluminum and the raw materials for all kinds of shooting irons and gunpowder and metallic scrap to be shot out of 'em Axis-wad. And the other day Interior Secretary Harold I. Ickes broadcast a strong appeal for automobile-less Sundays and cooler houses next winter, in order to economize on oil and gasoline, of which he foresees a shortage—not because there isn't enough oil in the ground, but because transporting it to strategic points promises to become a problem. That suggestion's accepted as making sense like-wise, oil and its by-products being required to propel planes and tanks, et cetera.

Woolton's Plea But not long ago Lord Woolton, England's food minister, emitted a clarion cry to us to cut down on our home consumption of edibles, so's to send our surplus to his islanders, who, so he says, are as hungry for it as bears. He begs us to get on to a basis of meanness or fishless or dairy-productless days once weekly or fortnightly or monthly, shipping whatever we thus save to them.

Now, the English, like lots of other overseas nationalities, are on short food rations; nobody questions that.

Considering, though, the yawning that's been going up in this country for years concerning our surplusage of farm products, with its resultant skimpiness of the prices our farmers have been able to get for 'em; considering our killings of little pigs and unplannings of various crops; considering the "parity payments" we're making to agriculture right now—

Is It Necessary?

Does it seem as if we need to resort to eatless days to have a modicum left over to send abroad? And our cattle raisers and dairy-men and sugar growers? Until lately they've yelled their heads off for protection against imports of meat and milk and butter and cheese and sweets, on the ground that they already are domestically over-producing and that pauper-grown incoming stuff simply is ruining their own congested markets here in the U. S. A.

England's pinched for grub, undoubtedly. But a large share of the Senate's verdict is that that's because shipping facilities are lacking to deliver the goods across the Atlantic—not because we haven't got 'em here to deliver, if enough boats were available to do the carrying.

"Eatless days!—hokey!" say the anti-food-rationing senators.

Drawing the Purse Strings

From the Cincinnati Enquirer

In a sensible compromise, House and Senate conferees have speedily forbidden the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to spend money for any of five extravagant projects considered by Congress to be unnecessary at present. The proposed undertaking are the St. Lawrence waterway, the Florida ship canal, the Passamaquoddy tidal project, the Tombigbee waterway, and the Nicaraguan canal.

Earlier, the Senate had merely limited funds of any new corporation to $300,000,000, and had forbidden the use of funds for any project previously rejected by Congress. The House simply forbade new corporations of more than $100,000,000 capital. The conference committee's compromise provision, still subject to the approval of both Houses, is far better, since it definitely eliminates any danger of the government's embarking on these extravagant schemes.

Conceivably the Nicaraguan canal would be of value in our national defense for the present emergency—if it could be built in one-quarter of the time it actually would take. But the enlargement of the capacity of the Panama canal, already well under way, will serve a like purpose and will be ready much sooner, at less cost.

None of the other proposed undertakings seems to have any significant relation to our defense in the present grave crisis. It would be foolhardy to divert funds—and therefore, labor and materials—to such projects when every possible workman and every ton of steel are needed for the preparedness program.

Digest of Opinions By Weekenders Is Reported by Hill

By EDWIN C. HILL

Many of us used to have a Monday morning headache. Now it's apt to be a Monday morning earache. We hope that if any week-end hostess we have ever had should read this, she will not misunderstand. What we mean is that our disjointed times are inciting clamorous conversation and argument which not even the most gracious week-end hospitality can tone down to the erstwhile decorous murmurs about how beautiful the country is, or what's a good mange cure for a short-haired dog, or the best way to make Hollandaise dressing.

However, we welcome the earache. It's time for a big national conversational warm-up on what comes next and why and how and when. This week-end company I have in mind included ten or twelve persons of perhaps unusual big-town sophistication, and two who are supposed to have some dependable pipe-lines into Washington.

In Different Fields One was a cagey industrialist, but dressed behind a mountain of bluffs, but with a singularly flexible and objective mind. Three made their living in the general field of the arts, including architecture, and one or two were bookish men who had explored far-ranging forces antecedent to the current world crack-up, and one of these was on record with having predicted it all in a magazine article about fifteen years ago.

We tried to work out a sort of amalgam of all their views, as a possibly interesting slice of representative American opinion at a time when a lot of heavy-duty thinking is called for, possibly more than ever before in our history. Insofar as any drift or agreement could be discovered, the main emphasis and general conclusions were something like this:

Inflation: It's coming and neither Leon Henderson nor any governmental device in the domain of controlled price economics will prevail against it. The black witch will conjure our dollars into dimes.

Liquidity Best Bet

Hedging: There isn't any safe hedge against inflation. Land and commodities are fairly good bets, but liquidity is the one best bet. If you have in the bank even pitifully depreciated money, you have many alternatives as to what to do with it. Keep diversified and keep liquid. New Form of Society: This was a conservative group and there was no interest in the question, raised by one of the two bookworms, as to whether the terms of survival for nations have been changed by modern machine techniques. The look-ahead was entirely in the view of traditional world relationships and basic social structure. The bookworms were a minority of two.

Possible One Hundred Billion Dollar Debt: It will be repudiated. How? Partly by the manipulation of our twenty-two billions of gold, which is being held for that purpose. The shrewd and informed industrialist was especially keen and enlightening as to this. We once had a twenty-dollar gold piece, but we couldn't follow him more than a block or two.

Want to Save Face

The Philipines: The Filipinos don't want to be turned loose, for obvious reasons. But for years they have been howling for freedom. Now they want to save their face by having us flatly refuse to let them go. Quezon has been working that up in Washington. We'll probably oblige them. This is supposed to have come through one of those pipe lines from Washington. Can Hitler Hold His Gains? No. There was a gush of stories from a friend of a friend, bootlegged through from all captive countries, telling of adroit and effective sabotage everywhere. The whole shenanigan probably will collapse within a year. One of the bookworms quoted an old Latin proverb, "That which is built on force alone collapses of its own weight." Everybody felt better.

Taxation: We've got to face it at least a partial preventive of utterly ruinous inflation.

Are We Down-Hearted? Not a bit. We'll fight it if we have to and again from that Washington pipeline—armament is going ahead much faster than we think; we have infinite resources and the greatest industrial establishment in the world.

DESPAIR

It Was Hard to Understand Mr. Kent, but Once You Did, All Your Troubles Seemed to Disappear

By ELIZABETH HAMILTON

Miss Kay, Mr. Kent is here. "All right, Hilda. Let the packing go for a few minutes. I want to talk to him alone." Kay stood staring out the window at the traffic down below on Riverside Drive, not turning even when she heard Kent enter the room.

Kent crossed the room slowly, a little self-consciously because Kay had not turned to greet him. "Markow tells me you're leaving the show tonight. Is that right?" he said at last.

Kay nodded without turning around.

"Kay, I suppose you've got a good reason for leaving, at least it seems important to you now. But I'm and that was to be expected," he added as he tossed the paper onto the table.

Even before she put it into words, Kent knew what Kay was going to say. There had been something of the same expression in the newspaper picture of Harry Benton, snapped as he left the courtroom after sentence had been passed.

And yet, despite all this, she loved him and wanted him. He represented to her all that her own life had lacked so pitifully—culture, refinement, security, beauty. And now this business of Harry's, the ugliness of it, would take him from her.

Markow, her producer, came to see her just as she was leaving for the airport, and his arguments, his pleadings with frequent mention of "career" and "contract" made Kay miss the early plane.

All during the trip Kay's thoughts alternated between Kent and her mother. . . . Kent and her mother. When she thought of Kent she had no hope at all that he would accept her now. And her mother . . . going through this alone . . . her mind played with the most terrifying possibilities . . . suicide . . . insanity . . . what could she expect?

Even before she had done more than put the key in the lock her mother questioned "Kay?" I was expecting you," she said quietly as she opened the door. "Mr. Kent here and I were just talking . . ."

"Bless you, Kent," Kay whispered, "but how did you do it?"

"Chartered a plane," he answered softly, "but I didn't think I'd beat you here. I couldn't let you . . ."

Mrs. Benton interrupted, "What was that you quoted to me a minute ago, Mr. Kent? 'God shall forgive us everything but our despair'?"

Was that it? Then changing her tune she said brusquely, "Put your things down, Kay, and sit down here. I was just telling Mr. Kent about the time Harry brought home that stray pup he found wandering about the school yard. Harry wasn't really a bad boy, Mr. Kent . . ."

Act as Grownup After You Marry, Dr. Myers Advises

Marital Troubles, in Many Cases, Begin over Small Irritations

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

Yesterday I ventured to offer some advice to those about to marry. Assuming they are married today, please allow me to speak to them.

If you haven't yet been weaned emotionally from your family try to cut the apron strings at once. Otherwise your marriage is headed for the rocks. Don't go to live with your in-laws or your parents. Better for a young married couple to live in a hotel or a single room alone than to dwell in a palace with the parents of either one of them.

Understanding Needed
Please remember that no matter how similar are the families from which you and your husband came, each has brought some family patterns which the other will not like or easily understand. Try to understand these patterns and to make the most of them.

Try to act grown-up. At best you will be very childish in many ways and see childish things in your spouse. Be too big to let little things get you down. Often marital troubles begin over matters too small for children ten years old to quarrel over. Small vexations easily lead to big ones.

Small Vexations
It might help you if, at quiet moments, you would realize how small vexations lessen or destroy your feelings of affection.

Here are some familiar steps toward marriage failure. Small, occasional irritations by the wife and husband toward each other growing into larger and more frequent ones, reducing mutual affection; next one spouse or both cultivate interest in another of the opposite sex, at first "innocent," later deliberate, perhaps, resulting in more irritation at the other spouse, less compatibility between them, ending in divorce.

Avoid Gossip
Nearly every man or woman at some time after marriage, often very early, discovers something in the wife or husband which worries him or her. The temptation then is to talk to an "old friend" or relative about it, who in turn secretly enjoys the gossip and magnifies the matter. Before long, the trouble, however small, may become tragic, even disastrous, to the marriage.

Wiser persons never talk critically of the other spouse to anybody but an expert or some other person he knows to be objective and entirely disinterested.

year-old child who is late getting off to school because she dawdles habitually in the morning?

A. I would hope no child as old as eight would be punished physically. Let this child be told the night before that she will be held responsible for getting off to school on time hereafter. Then keep your word. Call her in ample time. Never say "Hurry." Let her know that if she is not ready to leave on time (time definitely named beforehand) she will have to stay home, for at least the forenoon, and sit in a chair doing nothing for exactly two hours, without book, radio or anything else to amuse her. Proceed in like fashion every morning until she is "cured." Win the cooperation of the school in this program. To be successful, you might need adhesive on your lips to hold them together. The tongue will be your biggest hindrance to the child's success.

Girls Central Graduates Attend Lecture Meeting

Hear Address by The Rev. Mr. McKeown on "Perseverance"

The Alumnae Association of Girls Central High School held its last dinner-lecture meeting of the season last night at the Fort Cumberland Hotel, with twelve graduates of Girls Central high school as guests of honor.

The Rev. Francis J. McKeown, moderator of the alumnae, delivered the lecture and guided the discussion during the forum which followed. The subject of his discussion was "Perseverance."

By way of introduction the speaker showed that this was a fitting and appropriate close for the series of monthly talks sponsored by the alumnae, and also a timely and encouraging point for the graduates. Taking the general idea of perseverance, he explained what this meant and all that it included. Analyzing this quality in the light of everyday experience, the speaker explained the idea of duty and how important it is for the individual to acquire and persevere in a sense of duty.

Duty Is Ignored

"Today the idea of duty is ignored because so many have become indifferent to truth and justice," the Rev. McKeown said. "In an attempt to gain so-called freedom, man has cast aside all restraint, and abandoned all principle, and as a result he becomes disinterested and is eventually overcome by disgust, and is sometimes even given to despair. This explains the bitterness and cynicism of so many, and it likewise makes clear their distrust of others."

Losing heart themselves because they no longer have any hope, they feel there is no reason to persevere. Thus, once deprived of contentment and happiness, they see only failure and are given either to presumption or despair."

The speaker said that all "the fruits of the previous discussions would be lost if the idea of perseverance was not understood and put into practice. As he applied this to everyday life, he showed how necessary it was for the individual to persevere in a Catholic attitude. This was made clear by showing how the spirit of the modern world was intrinsically inimical to the spirit of Christianity."

The Rev. Mr. McKeown pointed out how the individual must not be deluded with a belief in the triumph of tolerance, "for actually tolerance never triumphed but only masqueraded for awhile as indifference, and from all indication it looks as if coming events are likely to snatch away the mask. Thus it is only by an adherence to real Christian principles that the individual can be prepared to meet the challenge of desperate urgency, and to succeed in meeting this challenge the individual must persevere."

Miss Murray Presides

Miss Mary Murray, president of the Alumnae, presided at the dinner and presented the speaker. Those present included Miss Mary Louise Barrett, Mrs. William Beier, Miss Jane Bell, Mrs. A. G. Bergeron, Miss Mary Margaret Birmingham, Miss Virginia Birmingham, Miss Mary Caffrey, Miss Rita Carpentier, Miss Bernadette Chapman, Miss Angela Coleman, Mrs. Edward Conroy, Miss Julie Downey, Mrs. C. By way of introduction the speaker showed that this was a fitting and appropriate close for the series of monthly talks sponsored by the alumnae, and also a timely and encouraging point for the graduates. Taking the general idea of perseverance, he explained what this meant and all that it included. Analyzing this quality in the light of everyday experience, the speaker explained the idea of duty and how important it is for the individual to acquire and persevere in a sense of duty.

Duty Is Ignored

"Today the idea of duty is ignored because so many have become indifferent to truth and justice," the Rev. McKeown said. "In an attempt to gain so-called freedom, man has cast aside all restraint, and abandoned all principle, and as a result he becomes disinterested and is eventually overcome by disgust, and is sometimes even given to despair. This explains the bitterness and cynicism of so many, and it likewise makes clear their distrust of others."

Losing heart themselves because they no longer have any hope, they feel there is no reason to persevere. Thus, once deprived of contentment and happiness, they see only failure and are given either to presumption or despair."

The speaker said that all "the fruits of the previous discussions would be lost if the idea of perseverance was not understood and put into practice. As he applied this to everyday life, he showed how necessary it was for the individual to persevere in a Catholic attitude. This was made clear by showing how the spirit of the modern world was intrinsically inimical to the spirit of Christianity."

The Rev. Mr. McKeown pointed out how the individual must not be deluded with a belief in the triumph of tolerance, "for actually tolerance never triumphed but only masqueraded for awhile as indifference, and from all indication it looks as if coming events are likely to snatch away the mask. Thus it is only by an adherence to real Christian principles that the individual can be prepared to meet the challenge of desperate urgency, and to succeed in meeting this challenge the individual must persevere."

Wives of Sulking Romeos Are Often Match for Them

BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage — Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

A letter received recently from a lady asks "What happens to some after they make the necessary responses in the marriage vows?"
Another one asks: "What changes the devoted lover into a domestic brat?"

And another one writes that her Romeo has turned into a grouch.
These things may not be as serious as they sound. The reason that some ladies see their lords in this mood, unflattering light may be due to the weather, or because the Romeo has been rubbed off, or perhaps it's just Wives Day to hunt for crumpled rose leaves. Whatever it is, I've had several letters lately, in which married women
confide various domestic afflictions to me. The prize plaint is: "My husband, who was a devoted lover before the 'I dos' were said, has turned into a chronic domestic brat-finder and won't even take me to the movies."

Unwise Policy

Granted the half is true, the policy of grousing at home is unwise. One indignant lady has written: "My husband has burned the boat which would have carried him to a snug harbor in his old age."

And here's another: "Being nasty at home is the domestic equivalent of squandering one's capital in gambling. The capital of love, respect and common courtesy is as necessary to keep a home going as fuel is required for the furnace."
But enough of quotes. I have more than a suspicion that some of the ladies who have written me these right bars on the subject of domesticated Romeos who sulk and find fault are more than a match for them. Their leaders prove it. The lady who wrote that the selfish brat-finder "burned the boat" has rammed up the situation.

Every woman should have certain rights in marriage, among them the right to expect courtesy from her husband. Some men seem to think that the "I wills" and the
"dos" of the marriage ceremony
are a ticket conferring the right to park politeness, consideration

Cling to the Hope

Most women—excluding the gold-digger type—marry because they are in love and hope to get an understanding and affectionate companion. And how desperately wives cling to that hope. It isn't enough just to pay the rent and supply
a woman with food and clothing.

"Not by bread alone," said the greatest of teachers. One of the underlying reasons for the great divorce percentage is that so many marriages are conducted on the
"bread alone" principle.

If a woman keeps house—and let no husband imagine that marketing, cooking, dish-washing and housecleaning, not to mention child care, is a pleasantly-automatic process—she is worth a little love-making and tenderness once in a while.

And how about throwing in a little fun, too. Now and then a movie, or an excursion or picnic over the weekend, when there are not too many calls on the pay envelope.
A woman's work is as trying as a man's, and all work and no play makes Jill just as dull as it does Jack. Now, let's hear from the husbands.

Intolerable Situation

Dear Miss Fairfax:
How much does a man owe his grown daughter? She is old enough to have her own husband and home by this time. Her mother is dead and I am married again to a good woman, whom I love and who would be good mother to my child. But the girl will not cooperate with us. She has jealous fits if I am nice to my wife. I love them both and want to do what is right by my daughter. But I don't want to lose my wife, whom I love also.

My wife loves me, too, but this way of living is getting her down, and she is threatening to leave us. I'm very unhappy about the whole situation and hope you can give me some advice.

LONELY.

You write me that your daughter is old enough to have a husband and home of her own by this time. But what are you doing for this happy solution of your family problems? Is your home attractive? Are your daughter's friends made welcome, especially her men friends? Does your wife cooperate in letting the girl have nice little parties to which her young friends are invited and are they given a good time?
Evidently you want your daughter to marry. Be practical. Give her the right background for choos-

the bit in your teeth and fly in the face of parental opposition.

You and the young man are convinced you love each other dearly.
Why not put your love to that most searching of all tests—time?
If you take the training your father has planned, surely he cannot object to your having some friends come to see you occasionally. Be patient. Go along with him for the time being at least.

Over-Strict Mother

My mother and I have never been very close and have never agreed on things. She allows me to go with boys, but has never permitted more than one boy at a time, and when we broke up she'd always accuse me of all kinds of things. I don't believe in smoking, drinking or putting and I always wanted to consider boys as just pals to go places.

I'm 20 years old and have fallen in love with a very nice boy of 21. Mother thinks he's all right, but she has a fit if he takes me out more than twice a week, or if he comes to the house to spend the evening.
I've gotten to the point where
I don't invite him any more,
but I do meet him outside, and then I have to promise to come home right after the show,
when we like to go to the drug store and meet our "bunch,"
and have an ice cream.

What are we going to do? I can't invite him to the house and parking is an unparadise sin in mother's estimation and I too am rather against it.
We're going to be married in about a year. Right now I'm working, although I don't pay board, so I'm really not independent.

GEE GEE.

Job versus Marriage

Dear Miss Fairfax:

When I first met the young man of whom I'm writing, it was love at first sight, if there is such a thing. He is three years older than I am and we get along "swell." He wants to meet my father and get his consent to our marriage, but my dad was so furious when I told him of our affair that he declines to meet him. He insists that I'm too young to marry, and that I should take up a business course of some kind so that I can get a job.

My mother passed away not quite a year ago, and I have no one to consider. Do you think I should break with the young man who loves me as dearly as I love him, or do you think my father will ever listen to reason?

SORROWFUL.

You tell me your father wants
you take up a business course, which would indicate that you not prepared yourself as yet for any kind of work. I judge you're about 17 or 18, which is pretty young to take

Father's Day Recalls Memories Of Seldom-Mentioned Ancestors Of the "Father of Our Country"

By Laura Fenner
Central Press Correspondent

WAKEFIELD STATION, Va., June 11.—With Father's Day now an established institution (third Sunday in June), it brings to mind the history of our nation—the father, grandfather and great-grandfather of the Father of our country.

Aside from the legend of the cherry tree, in which there is casual mention of a male parent, little is written of his ancestors, and it is difficult to realize that three generations of George Washington's family lived in America before him. And the three direct generations that preceded him lie buried in a little graveyard a mile from George Washington's birthplace, on land originally owned by Col. John Washington, his great grandfather.

4,000 Acres

Bridges Creek plantation, old Washington family seat in Westmoreland county, Virginia, at one time was comprised of approximately 4,000 acres. On one portion of it, 1,300 acres, which became known as Wakefield, Augustine Washington built his home in 1723, and it was there his son, George, was born, in 1732.

Other portions of Bridges Creek plantation are still owned by descendants of the Washington family. The eighth, ninth and tenth generations in descent from Col. John Washington, who came to this country from England in 1657, setting at Bridges Creek soon thereafter.

The house in which George Washington was born was destroyed by fire on Christmas morning, 1790. On the site today stands a memorial built by the Federal government, in 1931. While it is not a replica of the original house, it is, nevertheless, designed according to tradition about the historic home. The bricks in the new house were made by hand and burned on the grounds, even as were the bricks in the original.

Discover Relics

The house is furnished quaintly the period of Washington's boyhood, although but one piece of furniture that was in the original house is there today, a tilt-top table. Many objects that were used by the Washington family have been brought to light on the grounds where they had lain buried for 150 years. Among these relics are knives, forks, spoons, buckles, broken chinaware, and a brass thimble and scissors. They are to be seen in the museum on the grounds.

An 18th century type garden, enclosed by a boxwood-lined path, is growing vegetables, herbs, and flowers, shrubs and vines known to Washington as a boy.

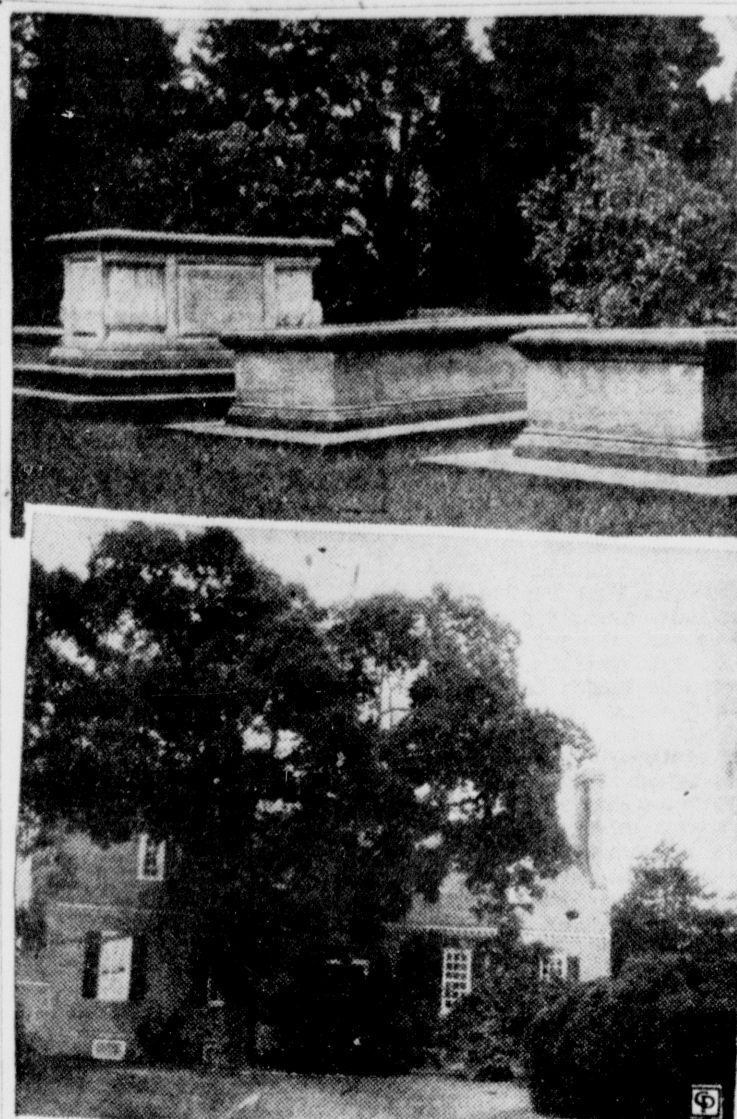

The house, like so many homes of the old plantations, is built near a river. The creek, which empties into the Potomac a few yards below, is in the old Bridges Creek cemetery, the Washington family burying ground a mile from Wakefield house, that one is struck with a feeling of nearness to George Washington and his ancestors, that other spot on the 400 acres of rural grounds offers so conspicuously.

Cemetery Near Potomac
A quiet road, off the beaten path of everyday travel, leads to a footpath that wanders through a shady grove of spruce and boxwood into a little sanctuary. There lie buried members of the family, including George Washington's father, grandfather and great-grandfather. Beyond the cemetery flows the mac river.

It should be pointed out that Mount Vernon earlier was known as Hunting Creek. It also had been owned by George's great-grandfather. There young George lived with his parents for four years after he left Wakefield and until they moved to Ferry Farm, near Fredericksburg. Lawrence Washington, half brother of George, remained at Hunting Creek and began the development of Mount Vernon as we see it today. At the age of 20, George Washington came into possession of Mount Vernon upon the death of his brother, Lawrence.

Drunks Get Jail If They Weave

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP)—Springfield police have devised a new test for drunkenness they say is better than walking a straight line. An officer tosses a coin on the floor and the suspect is told to pick it up. The manner in which he stoops and fetches it is noted carefully. It has to be done without weaving.

Then he is asked to read a page of fine print. The officers observe closely any defects in pronunciation and eye movements.

Small pox, formerly one of the major causes of death in the United States, now takes only about forty lives per year according to the Census bureau.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP)—Miss Mary McGinnis of the state employment service was surprised upon calling a job applicant to find he had given the county jail's telephone number. Just to make sure she asked whether anyone of that name was at the jail.

"He's not here now," reported the attendant, "but we expect him at any time. He's always in and out of jail."

Service Agencies To Open Campaign For Funds Monday

Conlon Announces Quota of $16,000 for Allegany County

Headquarters for the Allegany county campaign of the United Service Organizations will be opened today at 12 North Centre street, Thomas P. Conlon, chairman, announced yesterday. Miss Pearl Piper will be in charge of the office throughout the campaign.

Organization of division leaders and county chairmen is almost completed, it was revealed at yesterday's meeting of the general committee. The drive for $16,000 from Allegany county will continue Monday, June 23 and will continue until Monday, June 30.

This campaign is part of a nation-wide drive to raise $10,765,000 to be used in carrying out a recreational and educational program for soldiers, sailors, marines and defense workers for off-duty hours. Because of the reputation established by six service agencies during and after the World war, the government has approved the drive so that a co-ordinated program can be set up which will increase the morale of the defense workers.

Conlon, in referring to the drive, emphasized that the U.S.O. campaign will mean one drive for funds instead of six individual drives by each of the agencies engaged in the social and welfare work among the men and women serving the government away from home.

It also means, he said, that a more complete and efficient service will be given because the planned program will have a wider scope and avoid duplication of service.

Local representatives of five of the six agencies which are cooperating in the program are serving as the general committee for the Allegany county drive. There is no local branch of the Young Women's Christian Association. The service agencies include the Young Men's Christian Association, the National Catholic Community Service, the Salvation Army, the Jewish Welfare Board and the National Travelers Aid Association.

Richard Wiegand, this city, was given a legacy of $1,000 and after providing bequests of $500 each for six nieces and seven nephews, the will specifies that the residue of the estate be given to Lena Seiver, who was named executrix with George W. Legge.

DEATH AT THE SWITCH

RICHARD HOUGHTON

WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

SYNOPSIS

Henry Potter seeks shelter from a rainstorm at long-closed Wildwood Lodge, in whose big basement a model railroad club is operating its elaborate train system. A few minutes later John Ives, member of the club, is found shot to death in the train dispatcher's room. The next day, accompanied by a stranger named John Jones, whom Henry suspects is a policeman assigned to the job of shadowing him, Henry goes to Ives' house and learns that the dead man left a letter foretelling his own death. On suggestion by Mrs. Willett, Ives' housekeeper, the police call another meeting of the model railroad club the following night. Police Chief Williams announces to the assembly that Ives was a spiritualist and that he believed he could come back from death to show them who killed him. A train is started around the track, lights are turned out, and Ives' spirit is asked to derail the train in front of his murderer. The train goes off the track.

CHAPTER SIXTEEN

WHEN the lights flashed on, Henry saw in horror that the overturned locomotive was within reach of his hand. The train, half on the track and half off, was midway between him and Spinelli.

"It's Mr. Spinelli!" cried Mrs. Willett. "You..."

"It's Henry Potter!" exclaimed Stanley King. "I suspected you all along! The only non-member of the club here last night!"

Henry opened his mouth to deny his guilt. All he could do was make soundless motions. His voice refused to come out of his throat.

"Nonsense!" snapped Spinelli. "This has always been a bad part of the track. It's run off here before. And the whole thing's silly!"

"I agree with Louis," said Laurence. "I don't believe a spirit, even if it could come back from death, would be able to derail a train."

Now that the lights were on again the courage of the other model railroaders was returning, although the women still were white faced behind their rouge.

The police chief examined the track a few cars behind the locomotive. "Perhaps you're right. There's a bad spot here. Whoever spiked the rails down didn't line them up quite true at this joint."

John Jones peered over his shoulder. "Hm-m. Not much damage except to one car. Why don't we fix the track and start the train going around again?"

"Ay shut off power," volunteered Hans, and ducked under the table into the control room.

Henry was breathing a little easier. Except for Stanley King, no one had accused him. They seemed to take it for granted that the train had jumped off closer to Spinelli and had rolled a few feet before stopping.

The banker still bore him with his eyes. Henry read fear in those eyes. King thought that he—mild little Henry Potter—was a killer! "The result will be the same next time," Mrs. Willett told them stubbornly. "The train will go off in front of Mr. Spinelli, because Mr. Ives' wills it that way!"

"Do we have to go through all this again?" asked Marcia in a weak voice. She was staring toward the ceiling, through which still poured the eerie tones of the violin playing in the deserted lodge above them.

"I believe we're agreed that this first test wasn't fair—that it didn't prove anything," Chief Williams told her. With the help of Professor Bisbee he uncoupled the broken car and coupled the righted locomotive to the next car back. Hans turned on the power a moment to pull the train past the bad spot so they could straighten the rail.

"These rail joints on curves have given us considerable trouble," the professor explained. "We couldn't use a fishplate here because there needs to be a gap in the rail as insulation for a signal block, and the spikes we use to hold the rail ends are always working loose under these heavy locomotives. The locomotives, as you may have noticed, are filled with lead to give them more traction."

"A spirit could loosen the spikes," Mrs. Willett insisted. Her father was bending over the track, feeling it with his gnarled old hands. "They're such tiny things," he mumbled. "Tiny things! A spirit could move them. I could move them."

The chief frowned. The little clerk stole another look at big Stanley King. The banker was still staring at him. Henry shivered.

"All ready," said the chief. "Now, if you will all take different places..."

The club members and Henry reshuffled themselves around the room. Professor Bisbee, who had laid a pair of pliers aside on the table. "Those rails won't come loose again tonight!"

"Good!" said the chief. "Now, if you will all take different places..."

signals twinkled their color along the right of way. The headlight on the locomotive lighted up and the drive wheels began to turn. The train gathered speed, took its first curve as night settled down in earnest.

Large as a whole range of mountains loomed the black shape of John Ives' coffin on the table near the outer door. Like giants the club members waited at intervals around the huge circle. The violin upstairs moaned weird accompaniment to the click of little wheels over the rail joints.

Mrs. Willett, her father, the police and John Jones remained in the center of the room, but their shapes were fading out into the black. The last of the overhead lights died. There were no make-believe stars. There were only the house lights, too dim even to show the color of the window frames; the signals, which sent pencil-like beams only in one direction, and the locomotive headlight, illuminating only the glistening rails and occasionally a bit of wayside scenery.

"It's running perfectly," said Professor Bisbee. He called to Laurence, "Better not give it as much speed as last time. We don't want to wreck another car."

Henry heard Laurence return from the control room a moment later and fumblingly take his place by the track.

"John Ives!" whispered Mrs. Willett. "Do you hear me? Come! Come back from the spirit world and show us who killed you!"

Henry held his breath. The locomotive was headed toward him. It rumbled past, rolled along toward Susan.

Suddenly the headlight went out—so did the lights in all the houses, but the train continued on. Henry tried to measure its progress past Hans, past Laurence, into the realm of Professor Bisbee.

A thump, a bumping, a crunching of gravel! The train stopped. Room lights flashed on almost instantly. Henry blinked. The train was off the track in front of Spinelli! And Spinelli stood where Professor Bisbee said there could not possibly be an accident!

Susan gasped sharply. Spinelli was looking down at the train in disbelief.

Professor Bisbee pointed. "Look! Something on the track!"

Chief Williams stepped forward and picked up a glistening circle of metal. "Someone's ring."

Mrs. Willett's eyes were wide. She reached out a hand. "Let me see it! I think it is..." Yes! It is a ring John Ives wore!

Fewer Men Attempt Suicide than Women But More Succeed

NEW YORK (AP)—Studies by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. show that more women than men try to kill themselves but more men succeed. Altogether, the company estimates, 18,000 persons commit suicide in the United States in a year, and 100,000 more attempt it.

The survey showed two likely causes for the greater number of women suicides. One is that success increases with advancing age. More than half of the women who attempt suicide are under 30, but only about a quarter of them men. One out of six attempts by men under 25 is successful but only one

Rizer Presents Diplomas to Twenty-Eight Graduates

MT. SAVAGE, June 10.—Dr. Homer Howard, professor of mathematics at State Teachers college, Frostburg, gave an unusual and interesting address at the commencement exercises of the Mt. Savage junior high school last night in the high school auditorium. He devoted the usual speech-making routine by making his talk in the form of an inventory quiz for the students and their parents.

Dr. Howard enumerated six questions dealing with the fundamentals of living and asked his audience to take stock of themselves and see what kind of an average they had earned during the past year.

The first question concerned the essentials of education, reading, spelling and arithmetic. He especially emphasized the knowledge of percentage as a necessity to enable

Fruit Growers To Construct Cold
Storage Building

$75,000 Construction Will Have 150,000 Bushel Storage Capacity.

ROMNEY, June 10.—Construction will start immediately on the $75,000 Romney cold storage building by A. R. Warner and Son of Waynesboro, Pa. The building will be located north of Romney on the C. H. Parsons farm along the B. and O. railroad tracks.

For a number of years the fruit growers of this region have realized the need of a cold storage for their fruit. Several efforts have been made at different times to build a storage by calling mass meetings of fruit growers but nothing definite was ever worked. However, this spring, Roger H. Copeland, rural rehabilitant supervisor of the Farm Security Administration, in connection with the county agent, D. I. Law, revived the interest and a committee of fruit growers was set to work collecting the facts and details and estimates in regard to building a storage. This was submitted to the fruit growers. It was estimated that a 150,000 bushel storage could be built for approximately $75,000. A temporary organization was formed consisting of E. A. Leatherman, president; J. Howard Rannels, vice-president; L. V. Thompson, secretary; and A. Tom Machamer, treasurer. Fifty percent of the money was raised in stock, the remainder borrowed from the Bank of Cooperatives in Baltimore.

The storage space in this building will be proportioned to the fruit growers in proportion to the amount of stock they take.

Clinic Announced

Miss Jessie Roach, public health nurse, has announced a series of pre-school and well-baby conferences which she will hold throughout the county in cooperation with the citizens of the several communities. The purpose of these conferences is to provide every child between the ages of six months and six years who is unable to see his family doctor with a physical examination by a medical doctor and to provide an opportunity for every pre-school child in the county to obtain the inoculations and vaccinations necessary for school entrance.

Teacher Retires

Miss Margaret Hopkins Keller has retired from the faculty of the West Virginia School for the Deaf after having taught in that school for more than fifty years. She was presented with a handsome pin by the Jolly Silent Club, former pupils of hers at the School of Clarkburg in recognition of her services to the deaf of West Virginia. This record is outstanding in the history of West Virginia educational institutions and as a result of the existing pension retirement system requiring teachers to retire at sixty-five there will doubtless be future half-century records.

Production Up

WILLIAMSON, W. Va., June 10 (AP)—The Williamson, Logan and Kanawha fields in West Virginia and the Big Sandy and Hazard fields in Kentucky produced 27,900 more tons of coal in the week ended May 31, 1941, than during the same week in 1940, the Williamson Operators Association announced today.

Production for the five fields was 1,405,010, as compared to 1,133,110 for the same week last year. The year's production, however, is still more than three million tons below that of 1940 because of the April shutdown.

Rizer Presents Diplomas to Twenty-Eight Graduates

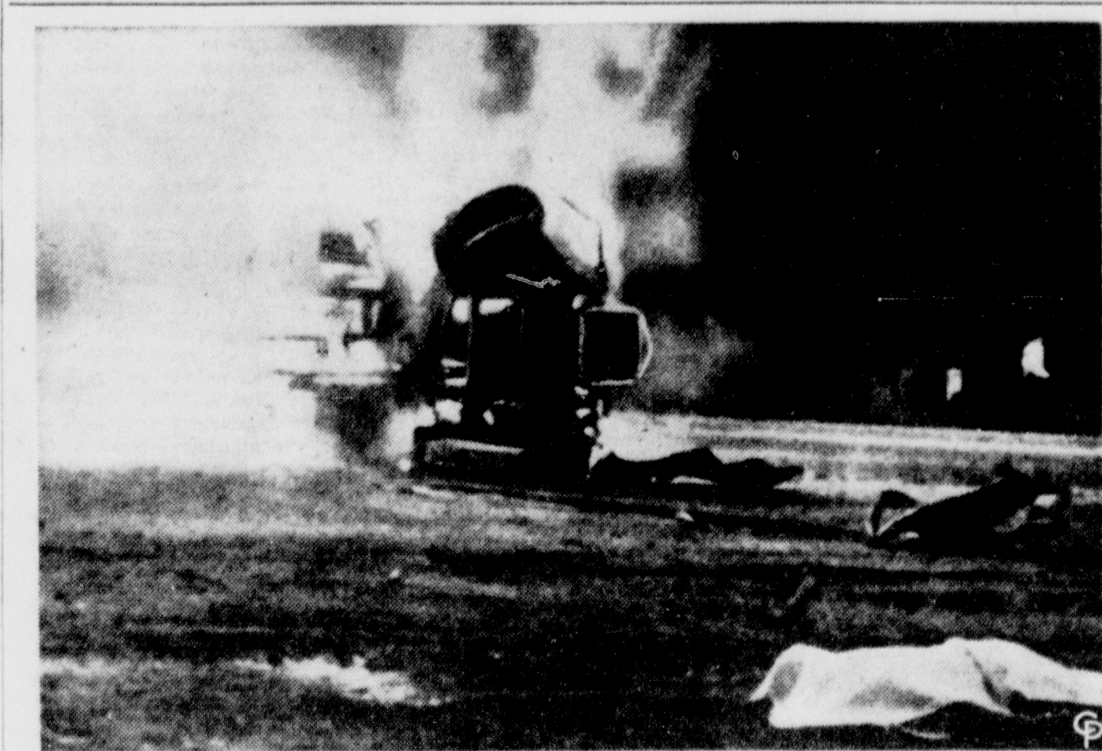

The other questions dealt with health, home life, understanding of work, preservation of our freedom of person, speech, worship and freedom from want and, lastly, cooperation with our fellowmen. Dr. Howard stressed the importance of his last question by saying that it is only by means of "group process" that "we grow as persons or succeed as a people." In order to get full credit for this question we should not criticize hastily or unfairly individual convenience for the good of all, he asserted.

After stating the questions, Dr. Howard gave practical advice as to how one could acquire a more thorough understanding of them and gradually raise the score until a perfect mark is gained. He concluded by offering his congratulations and best wishes to the graduates.

Richard Rizer, Allegheny county school supervisor, presented the diplomas to the class and urged them to continue their education at least to the university.

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

Senate Voices Approval Of FDR To Defer Men 28 Years or Older

WASHINGTON, June 10 (AP)—President Roosevelt would be authorized to defer compulsory military service for men twenty-eight years of age or older under legislation which would tentatively Senate approval today.

Final action on the measure awaited disposition of amendments to permit the government to take over strike-bound defense plants.

A committee recommendation for the deferment authority was accepted on a voice vote and with little debate. It would apply to men who have reached the age of twenty-eight by July 1, 1941, or on the same date in any subsequent year, and who have not been inducted into the service by that time.

The amendment would not alter present provisions of the law which require all men from twenty-one to thirty-six to be registered and classified. Those deferred because of age could be called for service later.

Approximately 7,000,000 men would be registered under the selective service law and would be affected if the president were granted such authority and chose to exercise it.

Lindbergh Proposed For Aviation Aide

Senator Brewster Appeals for Unity In Facing Problems

WASHINGTON, June 10 (AP)—Senator Brewster (R-Me.) suggested in a radio address tonight that Col. Charles A. Lindbergh be sent to Berlin as military attache for aviation.

Supporting President Roosevelt's foreign policy but criticizing his "handling of the Lindbergh affair," he said no one could be better qualified "to find out whether Germany is really building 400 planes a day as one returning diplomat reports."

Speaking over Columbia Broadcasting System, Brewster appealed for unity in facing the nation's foreign problems.

"Up in Maine," he said, "we have been brought up on the sea and when the ship gets out of sight of land we recognize that the captain is the boss. With breakers ahead and a storm raging it is not practicable to hold a town meeting every time we port the helm or reef a sail."

"I did not vote for the captain but along with 100,000,000 other Americans, I am still a member of the All-American team. If I am compelled to a choice between Roosevelt and Hitler, I choose Roosevelt."

Tippen and Ronald Kreider was fined $10 and costs on a charge of operating an automobile on a thirty-day card without being accompanied by a licensed driver.

Charged with driving while intoxicated, Langley was fined $100 and costs but sentence was suspended. He was also fined $25 and costs on a third charge—failure to stop after an accident—but he gave notice of an appeal.

FAIRMONT, W. Va., June 10 (AP)—The Fourteenth District Senatorial committee today recommended C. Howard Hardesty, president of the Fairmont Board of Commerce, and Junius Strouss and David C. Reay of Morgantown to Governor Neely for appointments to the unexpired term of State Senator Earl H. Smith.

Smith died recently in a Martinsburg hotel.

Denies Insurance

MOUNDSVILLE, W. Va., June 10 (AP)—Trial Examiner Fred B. Haught upheld a decision denying jobless insurance to striking workers at the Louis H. Marx Toy Factory in Glendale, ruling work stoppage was due to a labor dispute. The strike was settled last month.

Of all the verbal outpourings yesterday from London, Rome and Vichy, the most important utterance came from Prime Minister Churchill. He said that if Britain six months from now were in no worse position at home or abroad than she is today "a famous chapter" would have been written in her "martial history."

In effect, Churchill was saying that despite reverses in the Balkans, in Crete, in Libya—everywhere in the East except in the Levant—Britain is better braced to endure until winter than she ever has been. In answer to his parliamentary critics he pictured the lost battle of Crete as having served a good purpose despite its heavy cost.

Make 60 Mile Advance Events on the undeclared Franco-British war front in the Levant States tended to bear out that Churchill viewed as he spoke. British and Free French forces were in sight of Damascus and closely investing Beirut. Both are vitally important road and rail keys. A sixty-mile Allied advance in two days betokens no formidable resistance by French colonial garrisons, except along the sea coast.

Vichy, Berlin and Rome appear resigned to Allied occupation of all Lebanon and Syria as a by-product of French-German "collaboration." It would mean close linking up of British defenses of the Suez canal—defenses which would extend all the way from Axis re-occupied coastal Libya to the border of pro-British Turkey. And but for the defense of Crete, as Churchill pointed out, Syria might already be in Nazi hands.

That would be a more serious threat to British defenses of Egypt than the Axis re-occupation of Libya via the Sicilian Straits has yet produced.

British Mass Forces The battle of Crete obviously granted the British time to clear up the anti-British uprising in Iraq, and to mass forces for the invasion of French-mandated Levant States in retaliation for Nazi use of French facilities there. That was the point Churchill made to his critics. And with that invasion, British defensive bastions from Turkey to Libya have been powerfully strengthened.

Despite Mussolini's fist-shaking address yesterday, which was aimed largely at the American help-for-Britain policy, and Admiral Darlan's appeal for unified French support for the collaboration policy, Churchill's defense of his war management raises first attention. That it strengthened his hold on British confidence obvious; just as Darlan's failure even to mention the Syrian crisis hints at growing doubt over French public acceptance of his policies.

Churchill not only drew an encouraging picture of British defense dispositions in the East; but termed May Britain's "best month" in the Atlantic. However, he gave figures only for Axis shipping sunk or scuttled, aggregating nearly 250,000 tons.

There have been recent unofficial intimations of declining rather than increasing British ship losses in the Atlantic. A London accounting on a month-by-month basis is soon due. It may show that the losses in that ocean did not exceed the Churchill figure for German used shipping destroyed in May.

The largest credit item for the British in the Atlantic of recent date, however, was the destruction of the Nazi Battleship Bismarck. There also have been hints that German submarine losses there are increasingly heavy or that the American patrol policy is taking important effect. That latter implication might attach to a Rome report of Italian submarine activity in the Atlantic.

Presumably that means the South Atlantic. It raises a question as to whether the reported torpedoing of the American ship Robin Moor in those waters might not have been by a Fascist instead of Nazi submarine.

In any event, Italian submarines would seem best suited to Mediterranean service against the British unless called into the Atlantic by Berlin due to declining German effectiveness there.

Truck Driver Is Burned to Death; CHESAPEAKE, O., June 10 (AP)—Jesse Taylor, 30, of Columbus, O., and Beckley W. Va., was burned to death, and Rufus Miles, 29, of Parkersburg, W. Va., was seriously injured today when two big trucks crashed head-on seven miles west of Chesapeake.

Taylor's body was burned beyond recognition, but several hours after the accident he was identified as a driver for the Globe Transfer and Storage Co. of Columbus. The vehicle from which his body was pulled was a trailer truck loaded with packing boxes.

Miles was taken to a hospital at Huntington. He suffered head injuries and cuts and bruises, and his condition was listed as fair.

As equally charming an effect as those done by the duchess can be achieved by the woman with ideas and the ambition to experiment until the finished product is perfect. It is necessary to remember that every woman has a knack for creativeness and needs only a chance to prove that this knack is well placed in the hands of the average American woman.

Bids Asked for Dam at Bear Creek Hatchery

OAKLAND, Md., June 10 (AP)—The State Game and Inland Fish Commission today prepared to ask for bids on the construction of a dam at its Bear Creek Fish Hatchery to replace the structure washed away by high water following a near-catastrophe last Thursday.

After inspecting conditions at the hatchery, Frank L. Bentz, chief clerk to the commission, said bids would be advertised as soon as possible for the new concrete structure across Bear creek.

Bentz said a temporary dam had been erected by commission employees, and that the hatchery was operating normally. Although water flowed into some of the ponds during the brief flood, no fish were lost, he added.

The concrete dam which was washed away, Bentz said, had been in service for many years.

Falls Fifty Feet, Gets Up, Walks Off

BEREA, Ky. (AP)—Reed Cromer, 20-year-old Berea college student from London, Ky., fell from the top of a four-story dormitory building to a marble floor 50 feet below.

He got up and walked away but other students feared he had been injured seriously and was too dazed to know it and took him to a hospital.

But X-rays and a thorough examination showed he suffered only a minor hip bruise.

LOGAN, W. Va., June 10 (AP)—After two years of planning, Tom Orr and Bob Harris expect to be ready June 30 to cast off for a 2,000-mile canoe trip down the Guyan, Ohio and Mississippi rivers to New Orleans.

Conn Predicts He'll Win Title on Knockout

Pilot Ray Says Champ Has Lost Lots of His Punch

Says Pittsburgher Won't Take It Easy Once He Hurts Louis

By SID FEDER

POMPTON LAKES, N. J., June 10 (AP)—Billy Conn and Johnny Ray, a pair who get on like hot oil and eggs, one minute and pickles and ice cream the next, have come a long way together—alone.

And now they're alone again as Billy the battler gets ready for the one big shot—the crack at Joe Louis's heavyweight championship in New York's Polo Grounds a week from tomorrow.

Plenty of folk are around them here in the Ramapo hills, but not even their best friends are with them when Billy and Johnny tell you flatly the Pittsburgher pretty boy won't only win Louis's title, but actually will flatten the Brown Bomber doing it.

Explains Kase Beliefs
"All right, laugh if you want to," the handsome Irish kid and his friendly little Jewish manager chorus in unison. "But we're more confident than ever now that Joe won't be around when the bell goes off for the fifteenth round. There just won't be any bell, because it'll all be over by then."

"If I didn't think so," Billy picks up the solo, "what would I be doing way out here in the woods? I don't like it out here. It's too quiet and there's nothing to do. Give me New York or Pittsburgh. I'd rather work in the gym."

Johnny explains these knockout beliefs by (1) his opinion that Louis "has lost fifty per cent of his punch," and (2) that "Billy won't take it easy like a lot of the other guys once he has Joe hurt."

"No, sir," Johnny goes on, after a quick shift of his toothpick, "Billy'll wear Joe down until he won't be able to come out for any more."

Bear Went on Defensive
"Just look back at the fellows who hurt Louis. After Tony Galento hurt him in the first round, Tony went right back into his shell until Joe recovered. After Tony knocked him down in the third, the same thing happened."

"And think back to when Buddy Fuser busted Joe through the ropes in Washington a couple of weeks ago. After Louis climbed back into the ring, he went on the defensive and again Joe had time to recover. Well, my boy Billy won't do that. Once he has Joe going he'll keep after him like a hungry hound after a guy carrying a hamburger sandwich."

"To be frank about it, Billy didn't look too hot in his five-round workout today with Johnny Cregan, battling Monroe and George Higgs, but the regular camp-goers maintained this was an exception."

Games Friday:
Wilkinson at Narrows Park.
Celanese at Potomac Valley.
Hyndman at LaVale.
Harris at Allegany Grove.

Romping to a 10-3 victory over Allegany Grove's last-place outfit at Community Park here while the LaVale A. crew was helping out by upsetting Harris Restaurant 14-5 at Eckhart, the Wilkinson Grocers moved into first place yesterday in Allegany County Softball League.

The Potomac Valley Cubs shook off a slump to defeat Narrows Park 3-1 in a hard-fought tussle at Potomac Valley and tie the Harris combination for the runnerup berth while in the other skirmish, Hyndman's improving aggregation outlasted Celanese Local 1874 at Hyndman to win 6-5.

The Grocers capitalized on the wildness of Grove hurler R. McMahon, who issued nine walks. S. Aman had a single and double for Wilkinson while Lewis, W. McMahon and Burkett shared the Grove's three blows off Gene Scaletta, who struck out eleven.

LaVale, which has scored thirty-eight runs in winning its last three games, tallied in all but the seventh frame in routing Harris. Paul Markwood gave the hard-hitting Froeburg crew only four singles with errors playing a prominent part in the Harris' scoring.

Andy Dunn Hits Hard
Andy Dunn had four hits including a triple for LaVale while Kamau and Blank each had a double and single. Ray Middleton a homer in the first and Robertson a double. Harris' four bingles were a homer by J. Bolt in the sixth, a double by Tippen and singles by Connors and Gus Harris. G. Bolt, Harris outfielder, featured with a running catch of Markwood's line drive in the seventh. Markwood struck out six as LaVale registered its seventh triumph in its last eight starts.

Potomac Valley broke a 1-1 deadlock and won the game in the sixth when two runners crossed the plate. Martin beat out a bunt. Park Pitcher Billy Raupach unc

Cards Win on Warneke's One-Hit Pitching

National League Pacemakers Trim Phillies, 3 to 0

"Everything I Threw Went Where I Wanted," Says Veteran Hurler

By TED MEIER

PHILADELPHIA, June 10 (AP)—Lon Warneke had his "stuff" today and the veteran righthander turned in a brilliant one-hit pitching performance as the first place St. Louis Cardinals shutout the Phillies, 3 to 0.

Little Emmett Mueller, the first man to face Warneke, slammed a line drive single to right field. He reached second on Joe Marty's sacrifice, but thereafter Warneke took command permitting only three other Phils to reach first, all on walks and retiring the last eighteen men in order.

It was the third one-hit game at Shibe Park in a week. Last Tuesday Tommy Hughes blanked the Chicago Cubs with one hit for the Phils. Johnny Vander Meer, of Cincinnati, turned the trick against the Phils Friday night.

Warneke's slider was working to perfection. His fast ball had a hop to it and his curve broke so sharp that he fanned six on called third strikes. "Everything I threw went where I wanted," he remarked in the clubhouse afterward.

Before the game the Phils announced they had signed Bill Harrison, star six ft. four-inch catcher for the University of Virginia. The score:

In Memoriam

DONALDSON—In loving memory of a dear husband, Walter M. (Toots) Donaldson, who was fatally injured June 11, 1939.

Oh, what would I give to clasp your hand,
Your dear, kind face to see,
Your loving smile, your welcome voice,
That meant so much to me.
No one knows the silent heartache
Of the grief that is borne in silence
For the one I loved so well.

Fondly remembered and sadly missed
by his wife, JEAN. 6-11-41-TN

$100,000 McCoolle Road Construction Job Goes Begging for Bids

BALTIMORE, June 10 (AP)—A $100,000 highway construction job in Allegany county went begging today.

State Roads Commission Secretary L. H. Stewart said no bids were received on a widening project near McCoolle and that it would probably be re-advertised under revised specifications.

The job was advertised May 27 and bids were to have been opened this afternoon.

The project calls for the addition of concrete shoulders to a 7.39-mile section of highway north of McCoolle. The cost had been estimated by commission engineers as approximately $100,000.

4,381 Foot Water Line to Airport Is Completed

City Project Is Finished in Three Weeks at Cost of $3,000

Completion of the 4,381-foot water line from River avenue in South Cumberland to the municipal airport site near Wiley Ford, W. Va., is completed, according to William J. Edwards, commissioner of water and light for the City of Cumberland.

The line, which connects with the city main and runs 100 feet on River avenue, thence down along the C. & O. canal and is suspended from the bridge across the Potomac river into Wiley Ford, was completed in three weeks. The city-sponsored WPA project was started on May 12 and finished Monday, June 9. Workers were kept idle eight days on account of bad weather.

Edwards said that 3,281 feet of Century asbestos six-inch pipe and 1,110 feet of six-inch cast iron pipe were installed to carry the water supply from Cumberland into Mineral county and thence to the airport. The line has been thoroughly tested and no leaks were reported.

The project was completed at a cost of approximately $3,000.

During the installation provision was made for fire hydrant connections at several points in case the residents of Wiley Ford decide to take advantage of them.

Simon K. "Loc" Carroll, city plumber, superintended the installation of the entire line.

Catherman Tells Rotarians That Improved Alphabet Is Necessary

Members Are Urged To Participate in Flag Week Exercises

While mankind has achieved marvelous progress in the development of basic inventions such as the wheel and the boat, there has been scarcely a particle of growth in one of the most important, according to Charles S. Catherman, Sr., business college head.

That lacking invention is the alphabet, Catherman told members of the Rotary club in a vocational talk yesterday at their weekly luncheon at the Port Cumberland hotel. It seems strange, he said, in view of the universal use of the alphabet, yet it is a fact that we continue stumbling along with an archaic system of ideas symbols which, in its wretchedness, makes for ineptness in spelling and confusion in learning. It is bad enough here, but Europeans are lost in a maze of their own phonetics.

"Y" Boys' Camp Gains in Popularity; Many Out-Of-Town Children Enroll

Lewis Reports One-third of 42 Registrations Outside This County

Ample proof that the Central Y. M. C. A. boys' camp has a popular appeal with out-of-town boys as well as those residing in Cumberland is contained in the fact that one-third of the forty-two youngsters already registered for the opening of the thirty-third season on Monday, June 30 are from points outside of Allegany county.

William H. Lewis, general secretary of the "Y", revealed this fact yesterday after announcing that Edwin L. Kuhn, physical director, and Ted Beidleman, of Hanover, Pa., leader, have been at the camp site since Saturday preparing for the arrival next Monday of a group of ten young men who will assist in putting the camp in tiptop shape. A truckload of equipment will be sent to camp today.

Recent Registrations
Boys registered for camp within the past week include Billy Barker, Silver Springs; Bobby Guggenheimer and John E. Adams and Douglas York, of Baltimore; Jack Keenly, Clarksburg, W. Va.; Jack Trimmer, Bedford Valley, Pa.; Herbert Ruter, Jr., and Donald E. Smith, Jr., of Fort Monroe, Va.; John and Jim Stump, Clarksburg, W. Va.; Bobby Rawlings, of Anacostia, D. C.; Billy Root and Phil Pelletier, Frostburg; Duke Marley, Jack Paupe, Connie Zimmerman, William O. Doub and Richard Remeroy, all of Cumberland.

Donald E. Smith, Jr., is the son of a major in the United States Army who informed Lewis that the Y. M. C. A. camp was recommended to him as one of the finest places in this part of the country to send a boy for a summer vacation. The word passed on to the army officer by a friend whose boy spent last summer at the camp.

Prior to the opening of the boys' camp, the "Y" staff will entertain two groups of women who will be served dinner and will take part in a program of canoeing, motor boat trips and swimming. Forty members of the Girls' Sport Club will go to camp June 25 while on the following day fifty members of the Y. M. C. A. ladies auxiliary will be entertained. A ladies auxiliary will be entertained at the camp on the South Branch of the Potomac river near Springfield, W. Va.

June 23 Is Deadline
Registrations for boys' camp must be in on or before Monday, June 23, to assure accommodations. The boys' camp period is June 30 to July 28; girls' camp, July 29 to August 19 and Cumberland Police Boys' Club, August 20 to 27.

Those who journeyed to Annapolis several months ago from Allegany county to attend the hearing on the $800,000 school bond bill, conducted by Governor Herbert O'Connor, will recall that on the same day a hearing was held on a bill proposing to change the method of appointing trustees of century-old St. Mary's Female Seminary, St. Mary's City.

Quite a number of persons, including many aged persons, who professed to be alumnae appeared before the microphone in the state house and urged the governor to veto the proposal that self-perpetuating board of trustees be abolished, and a new board appointed by the governor.

It was a rather lengthy hearing and opponents of the bill put much feeling into their pleadings to the governor to have him veto the bill.

It is interesting to note that a check-up in Annapolis the other day revealed the fact that the biggest swarm of communications descended upon the governor as a result of that bill's (Senate Bill 464) passing both houses of the general Assembly.

The final score on the number of letters received was 1,300 for and 400 against.

Governor O'Connor signed the bill.

Local Firm Submits Low Bid of $154,353 For Highway Project

The Cumberland Contracting Company yesterday was announced as the low bidder on a contract calling for the improvement of the Loch Lynn-Gorman road between Kelo Gap and Gormania, in West Virginia.

The bid of the local company was $154,353.55, according to the Maryland State Roads Commission, which opened bids on four highway construction projects in as many counties, aggregating approximately $630,000.

Contract calls for completion of the unimproved section of the road, a distance of 2.424 miles. Surfacing is to be of penetration macadam.

A bid of $160,000 was submitted by the Potomac Engineering Company, also of Cumberland.

John K. Snyder, of LaVale, local representative, yesterday received a telegram from the office of Kington and Company, meat processors of Indianapolis, informing him that employees of the factories in Indiana and Richmond, Va., and twelve other branches throughout the United States contributed $4,000 toward a relief fund for employees of the Belfast, Ireland, plant, which was bombed several weeks ago.

Many of the homes of employees were destroyed by bombs and after the plant was put out of commission, the workers salvaged some of the machinery moved it to the country outside of Belfast and resumed operations.

Immediately after receiving word of the destruction of its property in Ireland, the Kington officials at Indianapolis opened a campaign to raise the fund to aid its distressed workers abroad. The results were gratifying and employees throughout the country have received thanks from Indianapolis for their contributions for a most worthy cause.

Those who journeyed to Annapolis several months ago from Allegany county to attend the hearing on the $800,000 school bond bill, conducted by Governor Herbert O'Connor, will recall that on the same day a hearing was held on a bill proposing to change the method of appointing trustees of century-old St. Mary's Female Seminary, St. Mary's City.

Five judges named to review the parade from a stand, which will be erected at the entrance to the company's service station on South George street, are Mayor Harry Irvine, James Orr, police and fire commissioner, John D. Liebau, J. William Hunt and C. V. Burns.

Prizes will be awarded for the best and most originally decorated bicycles. John O. The C.C.C. program is set up for two primary purposes—work and training. They assist in projects covering forest and soil conservation, road and bridge construction, recreational area development, landscaping, tree planting and maintenance of national parks.

Various Classes Held
Classes are held daily except Saturday and Sunday in safety, first aid, health and hygiene, government and citizenship. There are also optional classes in numerous vocational subjects that will be of infinite value to the boy after leaving C.C.C. Boys showing special aptitudes are ambitious and willing to work have an opportunity to become assistant leader at $36 a month and leaders at $45 a month. Through the efforts of the officers and educational advisers in contacting employers there is a well organized plan for placement of qualified boys in jobs in private industry.
